TWO DOLLARS A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THREE DOLLARS IF NOT PAID IN ADVANCE.

DEVOTED TO PURE LITERATURE, NEWS, AGRICULTURE, HUMOR, &c.

EDMUND DEACON, | EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1862.

ESTABLISHED AUGUST 4, 1821. WHOLE NUMBER ISSUED, 2110.

et to leave you liberty of action by telling

USEFUL AND HANDSOME PREMIUM!

TO EVERY TWO DOLLAR SUBSCRIBER, WHO PAYS IN ADVANCE FOR 1969, AND TO EVERY PERSON WHO GETS (POSIGE PERFECT BEAD!) A HARMONE COLORED MAP by THE SLAVE-HOLDING STATES—FOUR FEET LONG BY THE SLAVE-HOLDING STATES—FOUR FEET LONG BY THE SLAVE-HOLDING STATES—FOUR FEET LONG BY THESE FEET BEAD!

TER	MS	:-C	ASI	H 1	N	A	DV	Al	CE.
One c	opy,	one y	war,						82,00
8.6	86	two y	cars,						3,00
6.6	44	four	64						5,80
Two	top le	e, one	year						3,00
Four	0.0	6							8,00
Eight	0.6	- 0	16					. 1	10,00
Ten	64	6	6					1	12,00
Twen	ty "	4	6.					. 1	90,00
We send		opy G	RATIS	10		· w 1	perso		ho sem
				197				26

a club of Elour, Tax or TWERTY subscribers. This is in addition to the wap Premium, which we send to the getter-up of every Club.

For $3 we send ARTHUR'S HOME MAGAZINE and THE POST, one year each.

Appirions to Clubs .- Any person having sent a Club, may add other names at any time during the The papers for a Club may be sent to different Post-oribers in British North America must remit six cents in addition to the annual subscrip-we have to prepay the United States postage tion, as we have to propose on their papers.

Rustyrancia may be made in notes of any solvent Rustyrancia or Pennsylvania of other Eastern money. Gold (well secured in the letter) and posings stamps, are always acceptable. For all amounts over 8 we prefer drafts on any of the Eastern cities (less exchange) payable to our

DEACON & PETERSON, Publishers No. 319 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

THANKFULNESS.

Sweet bird, although thy pleasant music be All for thy mate, and not at all for me, I hear thy song as gratefully as she, And love thee still.

Fair flowers, that gaze on heaven as if ye drew Into yourselves the brightness of its blue, My love has still a quiet place that you Alone may fill

Great sun, thou doet not think to cheer my way By the warm lustre of thy light to-day, But kindled into gladness by thy ray, I bless the spell

Green earth, that with a gentle mother's smile, Thy weary child so sweetly can beguile, And soothe me still, heedless of me the while, I love thee well.

Ocean, and thou lone islet that I see, Ye show what Time is to Eternity; And teach me, all the while ye heed not me, Truth from above.

Oh foolish heart! too low thy praises fall If for thy love asconscious things may call, Dost thou not owe to Him who purposed all,

THE INDIAN SCOUT.

BY GUSTAVE AIMARD.

For the benefit of new subscribers who may begin with this paper, we give the following chapters of this

The scene is laid in the far South-west of the continent in the deserted regions on the Rio Colorado.

manche Chief. Eglantine is his beautiful young supplied the horses. This individual, Pepito recovered by her husband,

Marksman and Brighteye are honest scouts and hunters-Canadians by birth. A caravan of some thirty-five adventurers or gambusinos is travelling in the prairies - among the vehicles of the caravan is a palanquia, the curtains of which are never opened. At night it the caravan calls himself Don Miguel Ortega. A stranger joins the caravan-he calls himself whom he has engaged as a guide. He false to his leader. Don Miguel. sleep by a powerful drug, and then buried alive

Brighteye has enlisted in the service of Don

The three numbers of THE POST containing the chapters which we have thus briefly condensed, can be obtained at the office.]

CHAPTER IX.

BRIGHTEYE AND MARKSMAN.

At this point in his narrative, Brighteye stopped, and began, with a thoughtful air, filling his Indian pipe with tobacco.

There was a lengthened silence. His auditers, still under the influence of this ex-

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST reflections. At length Marksman raised his head.

"That story is very dramatic and very gloomy," he said, "but pardon my rude frankness, old and dear comrade, it seems to me to have no reference to what is going on around

"In truth," Ruperto observed, "what do we woodrangers care for adventures that happen in Mexico, or any other city of the Tierras Adentro? We are here in the desert to hunt, trap, and thrash the Redskins. Any other question can affect us but slightly."

Brighteye tossed his head in a significant manner, and laid his pipe mechanically by

"You are mistaken, comrades," he continued; "do you believe, then, that I should have made you waste your time in listening to this long story, if it did not possess an important reality for us?"

"Explain yourself, then, my friend," Marksman observed, "for I honestly confess that, for my part, I have understood nothing of what you have been good enough to tell us."

The old Canadian raised his head, and seemed, for a few moments, to be calculating the sun's height.

"It is half-past six," he said, "you have still more than sufficient time to reach the ford of the Rubio, where the man is to wait, to whom you have engaged yourself as guide. Listen to me, therefore, for I have not quite finished. Now that I have told you the mystery, you must learn what has come out to clear it up."

"Speak!" Marksman replied, in the tone of a man who is resolved to listen through politeness to a story which he knows cannot interest him.

Brighteye, not seeming to remark his friend's apathetic condescension, went on in the following terms :-"You have remarked that Don Torribio provided for everything with a degree of pradence which must keep off any suspicion, and cover this adventure with an impene trable veil. Unfortunately for him, the Evangelista was not killed. He could not only speak, but show a copy of each of the letters he daily handed to the young man-letters which the latter paid so dearly for, and which, with that prudence innate in the Mexican race, he had previously guarded, to employ, if needed, as a weapon against Don Torribio; or, as was more probable, to avenge himself if he fell a victim to any treachery. This was what happened: -The Evangelista, found in a dying state by an early customer, had strength enough to make a regular declaration to the Juer de Lettras, and hand him the letters ere he died. This assassination, taken in connection with the attack on the serenos by a numerous band, and the invasion of the Convent of the Bernardines, furnished a clue which the police began following with extreme tenacity; especially as the young lady whose hody had been so audaciously carried off had powerful relations, who, for certain reasons known to themselves, would not let this crime pass unpunished, and spent their gold profusely. was soon learned that the bandits, on leaving the convent, mounted horses brought by their confidants, and started at full speed in the direction of the Presidios. The police even succeeded in discovering one of the men who rife-who was stolen by an Apache Chief but by name, brought over by the money offered him, rather than frightened by threats, stated that he had sold to Don Torribio Carvajal 25 post horses, to be delivered at the Convent of the Bernardines, at two o'clock in the morning. As these horses were paid for in advance, he. Pepito, did not trouble himself at all about the singularity of the spot, or of is carried into the captain's tent. The Captain of the hour. Don Torribio and his companions had arrived, bearing with them two women Don Stefano Cocheco. At midnight the stranger one of whom appeared to have fainted, and secretly leaves the camp, and proceeds to an immediately galloped off. The trail of the appointment he has made to meet the Canadian ravishers was then followed to the Presidio de Tubar, where Don Torribio alis dogged by Doming , one of the adventurers- lowed his party to rest for several days. who is discovered, however, and agrees to play There he purchased a close palanquin, a field tent, and all the provisions necessary for a lives a hundred times, either in our struggles had rescued two young ladies from a convent in the city of Mexico, where one had been put to night suddenly disappeared, with all his and, which was augmented by all the adtenturers he could pick up at the Presidio, to one being able to say in what direction ther search.

eye sall, and went on :-

"A nan, who, twenty years ago, did me a rather important service, whom I had not swered, simply. "I confess that the strange seen, since, and whom I should assuredly not position in which I found myself weighed name -the only thing I had not forgotten came to me and my partner Ruperto, while of the cities."

MARKSMAN THANKS PLYING EAGLE FOR HIS OFFER OF ASSISTANCE.

we were at the Presidio de Tubar, selling a "You are few panther skins. This man told me what I have just repeated to you; he added that away. Now that we are agreed as to our he was a near relation of the young lady, reminded me of the service he had rendered me -in a word, he affected me so greatly, that I agreed to take vengeance on his enemy. Two days later we took up the trail. For a man perto for a little while like myself, accustomed to follow Indians' signs, it was child's play, and I soon led him almost into the Spanish caravan commanded by Don Miguel Ortega."

"The other was called Don Torribio Car

"Could be not have changed his name?"

" For what good, in the desert?"

"In the consciousness that he would be

"Then the relatives had a great interest in this pursuit ?"

"Don Jose told me he was the young lady's uncle, and felt a paternal tenderness "But I fancy she is dead, or at least you told me so, if I am not mistaken." Brighteye scratched his ear.

"That is the awkward part of the affair," he said; "it seems she is not dead at all; on the contrary.

"What?" Marksman exclaimed, "she is not dead! That uncle knows it, then; it was they utter come from the heart." by his consent that the poor creature was buried alive! But, if that is the case, there must be some odious machination in the

"On my word, if I must confess it, I fear so too," the Canadian said, in a hesitating voice Still, this man rendered me a great service I have no proof in support of my suspicions

Marksman rose, and stood in front of the Brighteve," he said to him sternly, "we are fellow-countrymen; we love each other like brothers; for many long years we have slept side by side on the prairie, sharing good fortune and ill between us, saving each other's with wild beasts, or, our fights with the In

"It is true. Marksman, it is true; and any one who said the contrary would lie," the hunter replied, with emotion

he had gone. This information, though vague, "My friend, my brother, a great crime has Was sufficient up to a certain point, and the been committed, or is on the point of being relations of the young lady were continuing | committed. Let us watch-watch carefully who knows if we may not be the instrument "I fancy I am beginning to see what you chosen by Providence to unmask the guilty wan to arrive at," Marksman interrupted and cause the innocent to triumph? The him, "but conclude your story; when you Don Jose, you say, wishes me to join you have finished, I will make sundry observa- well, I accept. Yourself, Ruperto, and I, tions whose justice you will recognize, I am will go to the ford of the Rubio, and, be lieve me, my friend, now that I am warned, "I arall be delighted to hear them," Bright I will discover the guilty party, whoever he may be,"

"I prefer things to be so," the hunter an just and mind upright. But time is slipping parts, and understand one another, I believe we shall do well by starting "I will go whenever you please."

"One moment. Can you do without Ro

44 Y'em.

"What's the matter?" the latter asked.

"You can do me a service." Speak, Marksman, I am walting."

" No man can foresee the future. Perhaps in a few days, we shall need allies on whom we may be able to count. These allies the Chief here present will give us whenever we ask for them. Accompany him to his village Ruperto; and, so soon as he has arrived there, leave him, and take up our trail-not positively joining us, but managing so that, necessary, we should know where to find

"I have understood," the hunter said, baco ically, as he rose. "All right." Marksman turned to Flying Eagle, and exdained what he wanted of him My brother saved Eglantine," the Chief I have been walking for many a long day dent had collected our principal characters of his tribe. Two hundred warriors will fol low the war path at the first signal from my father. The Comanches are men; the words

"Thanks, Chief," Marksman answered warmly pressing the hand the Redskin extended to him; "may the Wacondah watch ver you during your journey!"

After hastily eating a slice of venison cook d on the ashes, and drinking a draught of pulque from which, after the custom of his nation, the only one which does not drink strong liquors, the Comanche declined to take a share the four men separated. Ruperto, Flying Eagle, and Eglantine going into the prairie in a western direction; while Bright eye and Marksman, bending slightly to the left, proceeded in an easterly course, in order to reach the ford of the Rubio, where the latler was expected.

"Hum " Brighteye observed, as he threw his rifle on to his left arm, and starting with hat clastic step peculiar to the woodrangers; we have some tough work out out for us.

"Who knows, my friend?" Marksman anwered, anxiously. "At any rate we must iscover the truth

"That is my opinion, too." "There is one thing I want to know, above

"What Don Miguel's carefully-closed pa-

"Why, hang it ' a woman, of course "Who told you so?"

"Nobody; but I presume so." "Prejudge nothing, my friend; with time, If will be cleared up "

Good grant it "He sees everything, and knows every thing my friend. Believe me, that if it hath, the rest. This morning as I foresaw that you are covered by the tall, and wide boughs of

do not at all understand these infamies in our hearts that trouble us now, it is be cause, as I told you a moment ago, He wishes "You are an honest man, whose heart is to make us the instruments of His justice."

"May His will be done?" Brighteye an swered, raising his cap piously. "I am ready o obey Him in all that He may order me.

After this mutual exchange of thoughts, the centers, who till this moment had walked side by side, proceeded in Indian file, in censquence of the difficult nature of the ground On reaching the tail grass, after emerging from the forest, they stopped a moment to look around

"It is late." Marksman observed.

Yes, it is nearly mid day. Follow me, we hall soon catch up lost time. "How so!"

"Instead of walking, would you not be in lined to ride? " Yes, if we had hornes "

"That is just what I am going to procure"

You have horsen? "Last night Ruperto and I left our horses

Jose had made with us, and in which I was and allow the reader to be witness of a sec c obliged to employ a cance." "Eh! Eh! those brave beasts turn up at a events of this history, and which took place a ucky moment. For my part, I am worn out. few hundred miles from the spot where acc answered, nobly; "Flying Eagle is a swhem | over the prairie, and my legs are beginning to refuse to carry me " "Come this way, we shall soon see them " hundred yards in the direction indicated by Brighteye, ere they found the horses quietly people live at a height at which all vegetation engaged in nibbling the pea vines and young reases in Europe. tree shoots. The noble animals, on hearing nestened toward the hunters with a neigh of limit of the desert, and advancing into the pleasure. According to the usual (ashion in mediana region of the tierra calliente for the prairies, they were saddled, but their about one hundred and twenty miles, the bonal was hung round their necks. The horeters bridled them, leaped on their backs, and any transition, in front of a virgin forest, "Now that we have each a good horse between our legs we are costain of arriving intime." Marksman observed, "hence, it is use less to hurry on, and we can talk at our ca Tell me, linghteye, have you seen Don M. quel Ortega yet.

"Then you do not know him?"

"If I may believe Don Jose he is villain. lations with him, I should be considerably realded to form any opinion, bad or good

"With me it is different. I know home. "Ah

"Very well, Indeed" " For any length of time

Long enough. I believe, at any rate to able me to form an opinion about him Ah! Well, what do you think of him? " Muck go - | and much bad.

"Hang it an n the same wase

you that I was only slightly acquainted with him; but it is possible that your opinion will soon be greatly modified, and, perhaps, you will regret the support you have hitherto given Don Jose, as you call him." "Would you like me to speak candidly, Marksman, now that no one, but He above, can hear us?" "Do so, my friend. I should not be sorry to know your whole thoughts." "I am certain that you know a great deal more about the story I told you last night than you pretend to do. "Perhaps you are right; but what makes

" Many things, and, in the first place this." " Go on.'

"You are too sensible a man. You have equired too great an experience of the things of this world, to undertake, without serious cause, the defence of a man, who, according to the principles we profess on the prairie, you ought to regard, if not as an enemy, still as one of those men whom it is often disagreeable to come in contact, or have any reations with."

Marksman burst into a laugh.

"There is truth in what you say, Brighteye," he at length remarked.

"Is there not?" "I will not attempt to play at cusning with you; but I have powerful reasons for undertaking the defence of this man, but I cannot tell you them at this moment. It is a secret which does not belong to me, and of which I am only the depositary. I trust you will soon know all; but, till then, rely on my old friendship, and leave me to act in any way." "Very good! At any rate, I am now be ginning to see clearly, and whatever may happen, you can reckon upon me." By Jove! I felt certain we should end by inderstanding one another; but silence, and let nothing be seen, we are at the meetingplace. Hang it! the Mexicans have not kept is waiting. They have already pitched their amp on the other side of the river." In fact, a hunters' camp could be seen a hort distance off, one side resting on the river, the other on the forest, and presenting perfectly fortified outworks, with the front turned to the prairies, and composed of bales and trees stoutly interfaced.

The two hunters made themselves known the sentries, and entered without any difficulty. Don Miguel was absent, but the gam-sisinos expected him at any moment. The unters dismounted, hobbled their horses, and at down quietly by the fire. Don Stefano Cohecho had left the gambucior at daybreak, as he had announced on the CHAPTER X.

FRESH CHARACTERS.

In order to a right comprehension of ensuing facts, we will take advantage of our priviesc by here, while going to the meeting Don | lege as story tellers, to go back a fortnight intimately connected with the most important

The Cordillers of the Andes, that immense soine of the American continent, the whole length of which it traverses under different In fact, the hunters had not walked one names from north to south, forms, at various elevations, immense llams, on which entire After crossing the Presidio de Tubar, the whistle, raised their intelligent heads, and advanced post of civilization on the extreme traveller finds himself suddenly, and without which is no less than three hundred and twenty miles deep, by eighty odd miles The most practical pen is powerless to deseribe the marvels innumerable inclosed in that inexhaustible network of vegetation called a virgin forest, and the sight, at once strange and peculiar, majes'is and imposing, which it offers to the dazzled sight. The most powerful imagination recoils before this for my own part, never having had any re prodigious foundity of elementary nature, continually springing up again from its own bestruction with a strength and vigor ever new. The recpers, which run from tree to tree, from branch to branch, plunge, at one more to the sky, and form, by their interlacing and crossing, an almost insurmountable barrier, as if jealous nature wished to hide from profane eyes the mysterious secrets of these forests, beneath whose shade man's f of depo have only reached at long intervals, and never unpunished. Trees of every age "Way are you surprised." Are not all men, and species grow without order or symmetry, as it sown by chance, like wheat in the forrows. Some, tall and slight, count only a This man is no worse or no better than few years; the extremities of their brancues traordinary influence, dared not venture any have retognized, had he not told me his heavily upon me. I am only a poor hunter, pleased Him to set those suspicious growing were about to speak to me about him, I wish- those whose haughty heads have seen centu-ussing up

olden e lived rs : but at was

H

ka

hen

test.

ining

I, the 1790.

iding

and

int wind as be state or nd their ear, and

> In some man; yet he Union ced la a secesh Gfor your To which " Madam, enftly murmur pure and limpid streams. which escape from the fiscures of the rock in some take or unknown river, whose bright waters had never reflected aught in their clear mirror, have the sublime secrets of the in picturesque confusion, all the magnificent productions of tropical regions; -- the acajon, the ebony, the palisander, the stunied make oak, the cork, the maple, the mimosa, with its elivery folloge; and the tamarind, thrusting in every direction their branches, laden with flowers, fruits and leaves which form a dome impenetrable to the anniesma. From the vast and unexplo red depths of these forests emerge, from time to time, inexplicable notice; furious howls, bline mianly, mocking vells, mingled with shrill whistling, or the joyous and barmoni our song of the birds.

After plunging boldly into the centre of this chaos, and struggling hand to hand with this uncultivated and wild nature, the traveller succeeds, with axe in one hand and torch in the other, in gaining, inch by inch, step by step, a road impossible to describe one moment, by crawling like a reptile over the decaying leaves, dead wood, or guano, piled up for centuries; or by leaping from branch to branch, at the tops of the brees, standing, as it were, in the air. But wee to the man who neglects to have his and his ear on the watch; for, in addition to the obstacles caused by nature, he has to fear the renomons stings of the serpents startled in their lairs, and the furious attacks of the wild beasts. He must also carefully watch the course of the rivers and streams he meets with, determine the position of the sun du ring the day, or guide himself at night by the Southern Cross; for, once astray in a virgin forest, it is impossible to get out of it-it is a maze, from which no Ariadne's web would belo to find the issue

At last the traveller, after he has succeeded in surmounting the dangers we have de scribed, and a thousand others no less terri ble, which we have passed over in silene emerges on an immense plain, in the centre of which stands an Indian city.

That is to say, he finds himself before on of those mysterious cities into which no Eu ropean has yet penetrated, whose exact post tion even is unknown, and which, since the conquest, have served as an asylum for the last relies of Aztec civilization.

The fabulous accounts given by some tra reilers about the incalculable wealth burie in these cities, has inflamed the covetousness and avarice of a great number of adventu rers, who, at various periods, have attempted to find the lost road to these queens of the Mexican prairies and savannahs. Others again, only impelled by the irresistible at traction extraordinary enterprises offer to vagabond imaginations, have also, especially during the last fifty years, set out in search of these Indian cities, though, up to the present time, success has never crowned these various Some have returned disenchant ed and half killed by this journey toward the unknown; a considerable number have left their bodies at the foot of precipices or in the quibradas, to serve as food for birds of prey; while others, more sunfortunate still have disappeared without leaving a trace, and no one has ever heard what has become

Owing to events, too long to narrate here but which we shall describe some day, we have lived, against our will, in one of these impenetrable cities, though, more fortunate than our predecessors, whose whiten d bones we saw scattered along the road, we succeed ed in escaping from it, through dangers ou perable, ell miraculously avoided.

Quiepas Tani, the city which presents itself to the traveller's sight after leaving the virgin forest of which we have given a sketch, extends from east to west, and forms a paral lelogram. A wide stream, over which ral bridges of incredible lightness and elegames are thrown, runs through its entire enermous block of rock, cut perpendicularly on the side that faces the plains, serves as an almost impregnable fortress, these four citadels are also connected by a wall twenty feet thick and forty feet high, which, inside the eity, forms a slope, sixty feet wide at the base, This wall is built of native bricks, made of mndy earth and chopped straw; they are called adobes, and are niseut a vard long. A wide and deep fosse almost doubles the beight of the walls.

Two gates alone give access to the city. These gates are flanked by towers and pepper-boxes, exactly like a mediaval fortresand, what adds to the correctness of our comparison, a small bridge, made of planks, extremely narrow and light, and so arranged se to be carried away on the slightest alarm, is the only communication between these gates and the exterior.

The houses are low, and terminate in terraces connected with each other; they are slight, and built of wicker and canavertales covered with cement, in consequence of the earthquakes so frequent in these regions; but they are large, airy, and pierced with numer ous windows. None of them are more than one story in height, and the fronts are covered with a varnish of dazzling whiteness.

This strange city, seen from a distance, a it rises in the midst of the tall prairie grass, offers the most singular and seductive sight On a fine evening in the month of October ave travellers, whose features or dress it would have been impossible to distinguish owing to the obscurity, came out of the forest we have described above, stopped for a mo ment, with marked indecision, on the extreme edge of the wood, and began examining the

After exchanging a few words, two of those esons remained where they were; the other es lay down on their faces, and, crawling ground. Before them rose a hillock, which,

if no great height, yet cut the horizon at right

late, and which completely concealed their dies. On reaching the top of the mound which they had found such difficulty in scaling, they looked out into the country, and emained struck with astonishment and ad-

The emisence at the top of which they were, was perpendicular on the other side, like all the rest of the ground, which extend ed on either side. A magnificent plain lay spanded a hundred feet below them, and is the centre of the plain, at a distance of about and imposing, Quicpsa-Tani," the mysterious city, defended by its massive towers and thick walls. The sight of this vast city, in the midst of the desert, produced on the minds of the three men a feeling of stopor. which they could not explain, and which, for a few moments, rendered them dumb with uprise. At length one of them rose on his elbow, and addressed his comrades.

Are my brothers satisfied?" he said, with uttural accent, which, though he expressed nself in Spanish, proved him to be an In " Has Addick (the Stag) kept his pro

Addick is one of the first warriors of his ribe; his tongue is straight, and the blood wa clearly in his veins," one of the men he trossed answered.

The Indian smiled silently, without reply--this smile would have given his com respions much matter for thought, had they

"It seems to me," the one who had not yet poken said, "that it is very late to enter the

To morrow, at sunrise, Addick will lead the two paleface maidens to Quiepsa Tani," the Indian answered; "the night is too

"The warrior is right," the second speaker emarked; "we must put off the affair till tonorrow.

"Yes, let us return to our friends, whom onger absence may alarm."

Joining deeds to words, the first speaker arned round, and, exactly following the rack his body had left in the grass, he soon and himself, as well as his companions the imitated all his movements, at the skirt of the forest into which, after their departure, the two persons they left behind had re-

The silence which reigns beneath these loomy roofs of foliage and branches during the day, had been succeeded by the dull ands of a wild concert, formed by the shrill rice of the night birds, which woke, and repared to attack the lores, humming hirds, and cardibals, belated far from their nests he roaring of the conguars; the hypocritica miawling of the jaguars and panthers, and the snappish backs of the coyotes, which reschoed, with a mournful sound, from the roofs of the inaccessible caverns and gaping pits which served as lurking-places for these langerous guests.

Returning on the trail they had traced with heir axes, the three men soon found themselves near a fire of dead wood, burning is the centre of a small clearing. Two women rather girls, were cronching, pensive and ad, by the fire. They counted scarce thirty years between them; they were lovely, and of that Creole beauty which the divine pencil a Raphael has been alone able to repro But at this moment they were pale eemed fatigued, and their faces reflected : gloomy sorrow. At the sound of the sp proaching steps, they raised their eyes, and a flash of joy illumined their faces, like a sun which was threatening to go out, while on of the hunters occupied himself with giving their provender to the horses, hobbled a short

" Well, Don Miguel," one of the ladies said, ddressing the hunter who had taken a sea by her side, "shall we soon near the end of ur journey "

" You have arrived Senorita; to morrow inder the guidance of our friend Addick, von where no one will pursue you." "Ah!" she continued, looking absently a the Indian's gloomy and apathetic face; "we shall separate to morrow. "We must, Senorita; the care for you safety demands it."

"Who would dare to seek me in those un known districts " Hatred dares everything. I implore you Senorita, to put faith in my experience; my devotion to you is unbounded. Though still very young, you have suffered enough, and it s time that a blessed sunbeam should brighter your dreary brow, and dispel the clouds which thought and grief have been so long ollecting on it."

"Alas!" she said, as she let her head droop to hide the tears that ran down her cheeks,

My sister, my friend, my Laura " other maiden said, embracing her tenderly; "be courageous to the end. Shall I not be with you? Oh, fear nothing!" she added, with a charming expression. "I will take half your grief on myself, and your burthen will seem less beavy."

"Poor Luisa" the maiden murmured, si the returned her caresses. "You are un happy through me. How shall I ever be able repay your devotion?

By loving me, as I love you, cherish ed angel, and by regaining hope."

"Before a month, I trust," Don Miguel said, "your persecutors will be prevented rom troubling you again. I am playing a errible game with them, in which my hear s the stake; but I care little, so long as I save you. On leaving you, permit me to take with me, in my heart, the hope that you will in no way attempt to leave the refuge I have found for you, and that you will pa-

"Alsa, Caballero! you are aware that I live only by a miracle; my relatives, my · Literally, Quegoas, sky, tani, mountain, in the Zarkothoono language.

rics pass over them. Beneath their foliage, the rank grass, which they caused to undu- friends, indeed, all those I loved, have aban- seems to be my mission—you know that every doned me, except my Luisa, my foster sister, whose devotion to me has never swerved and you, whom I do not know, whom I never saw, and who suddenly revealed yourself to me in my tomb, like the angel of divin since that terrible night, when thanks to you. I emerged from my sepulchre, like Luzarus, you have shown me the kindest and most delicate attentions; you have taken the place of those who betrayed me; yo have been to me more than a father." " Senorita!" the young man exclaimed, once confused and happy at these words.

"I say this to you, Don Miguel," she co tinued, with a certain feverish animation because I am auxious to prove to you that I am not ungrateful. I know not what God, is His wisdom, may do with me; but I tell you, that my last thought, my last prayer will b for you. You wish me to await you; I will obey you. Believe me, I only dispute my life through a certain feeling of anxiety, like the gambler at his last stake," she added, with a heart-breaking smile; "but I understand how much you need liberty of action for the rude game you have undertaken. Hence, you can go in peace; I have faith in you."

"Thanks, Senorita; this promise double my strength. Oh, now I am certain of suc

A rude jacal of branches had been prepared for the maidens by the other hunters and the Indian warrior, and they retired to rest.

Although the young man's mind was a full of restless alarms, after a few moments of deep thought, he laid himself down by the side of his companions, and soon fell asleep. In the desert nature never surrenders its claims, and the greatest grief rarely succeeds in gaining the victory over the material claims of the human organization.

Scarce had the first sunbeams begun t tinge the sky of an opal hue, ere the hunters opened their eyes. The preparations for starting were soon completed; the moment of separation arrived, and the parting was a sad one. The two hunters had accompanied the maidens to the edge of the forest, in order to remain the longer with them.

Dona Luisa, taking advantage of an instant when the road became so narrow that it be came almost impossible for two to walk side by side, drew nearer Don Miguel's hunting

"Do me a service," she whispered, hur riedly.

"Speak," he answered, in the same key. "That Indian inspires me with but slight onfidence."

You are wrong; I know him." She shook her head petulantly. "That is possible," she said; "but will you lo me the service I want of you; if not, I will ask Don Miguel, though I should have preferred him not knowing it." "Speak, I tell you

"Give me a knife and your pistols." The hunter looked her in the face. "Good" he said, presently. "You are rave child. Here is what you ask for." And, without any one noticing it, he gave objects she wished to obtain from him elding to them two little pouches, one of unpowder, the other of bullets.

to one knows what may happen," he "Thanks," she answered, with a move nent of joy she could not master. This was all that she said; and the wea ons disappeared under her clothes, with a speed and resolution which made the hunter omile. Five minutes after, they reached the skirt of the virgin forest. "Addick," the hunter said, laconically, remember that you will answer to me for these two women. "Addick has sworn it," the Indian merely replied. They separated; it was impossible to remain longer at the spot where they were without running the risk of being discovered by the Indians. The maidens and the war or proceeded toward the city.

Let us mount the hill," Don Miguel said. in order to see them for the last time."

"I was going to propose it," the hunter

They went, with similar precautions, to the spot they had occupied for a few moments on the previous evening.

In the brilliant beams of the sun, which and gloriously risen, the verdurous landscape had assumed a truly enchanting aspect. Na ture was aroused from her sleep, and a most varied spectacle had been substituted for the gloomy and solitary view of the previous night.

From the gates of the city, which were now widely opened, emerged groups of In dians on horseback and on foot, who dispersed in all directions with shouts of Joy and shriller bursts of laughter. Numerous canoes traversed the stream, the fields were populated with flocks of vicunas, and horses led by Indians, armed with long goads, who were proceeding toward the city. Women quaintly attired, and bearing on their heads long wicker baskets filled with meat, fruit, and vegetables, walked along conversing to gether, and companying each phrase with that continual, sharp, and metallic laugh, of which the Indian nations possess the secret. mbles very closely and the noise of which res that produced by the fall of a quantity of pebbles on a copper dish. The maidens and their guide were soon nixed up in this motley crowd, in the midst of which they disappeared. Don Miguel sighed.

'Let us go," he said, in a deep voice. They returned to the forest. A few mo ients later, they set out again. We must separate," Don Miguel said, when they had crossed the forest, "I sha

"And I am going to try to render a small service to an Indian Caief, a friend of

"You are always thinking of others, and never of yourself, my worthy Marksman; you are ever anxious to be of use to some man has one.

"What would you have, Don Miguel? It large drops:

"Yes?" the young man answered, in a hol low voice. "Good bye!" he added, pre sently, "do not forget our meeting."

"All right! In a fortnight, at the ford of the Rubio; that is rettled."

"Forgive me my chariness of speech du ring the few days we have spent together; the secret is not mine alone, Marksman; I am not at liberty to divulge it, even to se kind a friend as yourself."

"Keep your secret, my friend; I am in n way curious to know it; still, it is understood that we do not know one another."

"Yes; that is very important."

" Then, good bye." " Good-bye !"

The two horsemen shook hands, one rned to the right, the other to the left, and they set off at full speed.

CHAPTER XI

THE FORD OF THE RUBIO.

The night was gloomy, nor a star shone in the sky; the wind blew violently through the heavy boughs of the virgin forest, with that sad and monotonous soughing, which resembles the sound of great waters, when the tempost menaces; the clouds were low, black, and charged with electricity; they coursed rapidly through the sky, incessantly veiling the wan disk of the moon, whose cold rays only rendered the gloom denser; the atmosphere was oppressive, and those nameless olses, dashed back by the echoes like the rolling of distant thunder, rose from the quebradas and unknown barrancas of the prairies; the beasts howled sadly all the notes of the human register, and the night birds, troubled in their sleep by this strange uncasiness of nature, uttered hoarse and discordant cries. In the camp of the Gambusinos all was calm; the sentries were watching, leaning on their rifles, and crouching near the expiring fire. In the centre of the camp two men were smoking their Indian pipes, and talking in a low voice. They were Brighteye an Marksman.

At length, Brighteye knocked the ashes out of his pipe, thrust it into his girdle, stifled a vawn, and rose, throwing out his legs and arms to restore the circulation. " What are you going to do?" Marksman sked him, turning cautiously round. "Sleep," the hunter answered.

" Sleep ?"

"Why not? the night is advanced; we are the only persons watching, I feel convinced; it is more than probable that we shall not see Dan Miguel before sunrise. Hum! the best plan for the moment, at least, is to sleep, at any rate, if you have not decided otherwise."

Marksman laid his finger on his lip, as if o recommend silence to his friend.

"The night is advanced," he said, in a low rolce; "a terrible atorm is rising. Where an Don Miguel be gone? This prelonged absence alarms me more than I can express he is not the man to leave his friends thus without some powerful reason, or, per

The hunter stopped, and shook his head sorrowfully.
"Go en," Brighteye said; "tell me your whole thought." Well, I am atraid lest some misfortune as happened to him."

"Oh, ob, do you think so? Still, this Don Miguel, from what I have heard you say, is a man of well-tried courage and uncommo strength."

"All that is true," Marksman replied, with

Well! do you think that such a man well armed, and acquainted with prairie life, s not able to draw himself out of a diffi culty, whatever the danger which threaten who stands resolutely before him, and fights with equal weapons.

" What other danger can be fear ?" "Brighteye, Brighteye!" the hunter tinued, sadly, "you have lived too long among the Missouri fur traders." Which means-?" the Canadian asked mewhat piqued. "Come, my friend, do not feel vexed at my remarks; but it is evident to me, that you have, in a great measure, forgotten prairie habits. "Hum! that is a serious charge against a hunter, Marksman; and in what, if you please, have I forgotten desert manners " "By Jove! in seeming no longer to re member that, in the country where we now are, every weapon is good to get rid of an

"Eh! I know that as well as you, my friend; I know, too, that the most dangerous weapon is that which is concealed."

"That is to say, treachery. The Canadian started.

Do you fear treachery, then ?" he asked. " What else can I fear "That is true," the hunter said, with a drooping head; "but," he added, a moment after, "what is to be done?" "That is the very thing that embarrasses me. Still, I cannot remain much longer in this state; the uncertainty is killing me; at all risks, I must know what has happened.

"But in what way " "I know not, Heaven will inspire me.

Still, you have an idea ?"

Of course I have. " What is it?"

"This-and I count on you to help me in arrying it out. Brighteye affectionately pressed his friend's

"You are right," he said: "now for your "It is very simple, we will leave the camp

ectly, and go along the river side." "Yes-I would merely draw your attention to the fact, that the storm will soon break out, and the rain is already fulling in

"The greater reason to make haste." That is true

"Then you will accompany me?"

"By Jove! did you doubt it, perchance!" " I am a goose; forgive me, brother, and hank you.

Why so? on the centrary, I ought to thank you."

"How so?" Why, thanks to you, I am going to take delightful walk.

Markeman did not answer; the hunters saddled and bridled their horses, and after inspecting their arms, with all the care of men who are convinced that they will soon have occasion to use them, they mounted and rode toward the gate of the camp. Two sentries were standing motionless and upright at the gate; they placed themselves be fore the woodrangers. The latter had no in tention of going out unseen, as they had no reason for hiding their departure. "You are going away?" one of the sentrice asked. " No; we are merely going to make a survey of the country. "At this hour?"

"Why not?" "Hang it! I think it pleasanter to sleep in uch weather, than ride about the prairie.' "You think wrong, comrade," Marksman answered, in a peremptory tone; "and, in the first place, bear this in mind, I am not accountable for my actions to any one; if I go out at this hour in the storm which is threatening, I have possibly powerful motives for my conduct; now, will you, or no, let us pass? Remember, however, that I shall hold you responsible for any delay you occasion in the execution of my plans.

The tone employed by the hunter in ad dressing them, struck the two sentries; they consulted together in a low voice; after which, the man who had hitherto spoken turned to the two hunters, who were quietly awaiting the result of this deliberation.

"You can pass," he said; "you are liberty to go wherever you think proper. I have done my duty in questioning you, and may Heaven grant you are doing yours in soing out thus.

"You will soon know. One word more." " I am listening."

"Our absence will probably be short: if not, we shall return by sunrise; still, pay great attention to this recommendation should you hear the cry of the jaguar repeated thrice, at equal intervals, mount at full speed, and come, not you alone, but followed by a dozen of your comrades, for, when you hear that cry, a great danger will menace the Cuadrilla. Now, you understand me?"

"Perfectly." "And will you do what I advise?"

"I will do so, because you are the friends we expected, and treachery could not be feared from you."

" Good." "I wish you luck."

The hunters went on, and the gate was mmediately closed after them.

The woodrangers had scarce entered the prairie, ere the hurricane, which had threatened since sunset, broke out furiously. A bril liant flash of lightning crossed the sky, fol lowed almost instantaneously by a startling dap of thunder. The trees bowed beneath the fury of the blast, and the rain began falling in torrents. The adventurers advanced with extreme difficulty, amid the chaos of the infuriated elements; their horses, startled by the how! ing of the tempest, reared and shied at every step. The darkness had become so dense, that, although walking side by side the two men could scarce see each other. The trees, twisted by the ominipotent blast, uttered almost human cries, answered by the mournful howling of the terrified wild beasts, while the stream, swollen by the rain, rose into waves whose foaming crests broke with a crash

Brighteye and Marksman, case-burdened against the desert temporales, shook their heads contemptuously at every effort of the gust, which past over them like an ardent entinued to advance with the eye the gloom that enveloped them like a heavy shroud, and listening to the noises which the echoes bandied about. In this way they reached the ford of the Rubio, without exchanging a syllable. Then they stopped, as if by mutual agreement. The Rubio, a lost and unknown afficent of it falls after a winding course of hardly twenty leagues, is in ordinary times a narrow stream, on which Indian canoes have a diffialmost anywhere, with the water scarce up to their girthe; but at this hour the placid stream had suddenly become a mad and imdeep and muddy waters, uprooted trees, and even masses of rock.

To dream of crossing the Rubio at this mement would have been signal folly; a man so rash as to attempt the enterprise, would have been carried off in a few seconds by its firious waves, whose yellow surface grew wder

The hunters remained for a moment mo tionless beneath the torrents of rain that inundated them, regarding with thoughtfil eye the water that still rose and rose, and helding in with great difficulty their startled sorses, which reared with hoarse snorts of far.

These men, with their hearts of bronze, stood stoically amid the frightful uproar of the unchained elements, not seeming to notice the awful tempest that howler around them, and as calm and casy mined, as if they were comfortably sealed in some snug cave, near a merry fire of twiga. They had only one idea, that of assisting the nan whom they suspected of running,a terrble danger at this moment their heads, while looking fixed and eagerly in front of them. But the darlness was too thick; they could distinguish rothing.

cry was a last appeal, a harsh and prolonged cry of agony, such as the strong man conquered by fatality utters, when he is forced to confess his impotence, when everything falls him at once, and he has no other resource than Heaven. The two men leaned forward quickly, and placing their hands to their mouth funnelwise, uttered in their turn a shrill and lengthened cry.

Then they listened. At the end of a ment, a second cry, more piercing and desperate than the first, reached their cars.

man is in danger of death."

eye answered, boldly.

But how to save this man? Where was he? What danger menaced him? Who could answer these questions which they mentally asked themselves?

rent, the hunters forced their horses to enter the river, and lying almost on the necks of the noble animals, they investigated the waters. But, as we have said, the darkness was too thick, they could see nothing.

in despair. "Oh, heavens! shall we let this man die without going to his aid?"

At this moment a flash of lightning crosses the sky, with a dazzling zigzag. By its fugitive gleam, the hunters saw a horseman struggling furiously against the efforts of the Waves.

"Courage, courage !" they shouted.

cond was an age.

terror into the middle of the stream. Suddenly two shots were heard; a bullet passed with a whistle between our two friends, and a cry of pain was heard from the water The man they had come to help was wound ed. The storm was still increasing ; the flashes succeeded each other with extraordinary ra pidity. The hunters noticed the stranger linging to his saddle, and letting his horse carry him where it liked: then, on the other bank, a man with his body bent forward, and his rifle shouldered, in readiness to fire.

"Good!" Brighteye said, with equal brevity.

wrestled so bravely with the torrent. "Courage! courage!" Brighteye shouted;

help, Marksman, help !" And giving a smart shake to his horse, he made it rise on its hind legs, just as it was losing its footing, and forced it toward the

"Here I am," Marksman said, who was tience, I am coming went forth, and from the other bank a cry of pain and rage reached the hunters. "He is hit," Marksman said; "to-morrow I join Brighteye. ing itself supported and dragged toward the bank, seconded, with that intelligence pos-

made to save it. The two hunters held on the reata. The united strength of their steeds, belped by the lassoed horse, succeeded in breasting the cur rent, and after a minute's struggle, they at leagth reached the bank . So soon as they vere comparatively in safety, the Canadians

So soon as it felt terra firma under its feet, tie noble animal had stopped, apparently the Great Rio Colorado del Norte, into which comprehending that, if it advanced, it would east its master against the rocks that covered the ground, for, although insensible, he still held the bridle firmly clasped in his clenched culty in floating, and which horses can ford hand. The hunters cut the bridle, raised the man they had so miraculously saved in their arms, and carried him a few paces further to the foot of a tree, where they gently laid him; petuous torrent, noisily rolling along, in its then, both eagerly bending over his body, awaited a flash which would enable them to

"Oh!" Marksman said, as he drew himself up, with an expression of grief, mingled with terror, " Don Miguel Ortega!" (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Stripes, whether on a lady's dress or on the walls of a room, always give the effect of height; consequently, a low room is improved by being hung with a striped paper. The effect is produced by a wavy stripe as well as a straight one, and as curved lines are the most graceful, they should generally be preferred.

WHO GET THE LETTERS?-Of 68,000 letters sent off by one Massachusetts regiment in Maryland, since its departure from home, 26,000 were addressed to "Miss," and 21,000 to "Mrs" So sais a letter-writer, who adds: "The figures show that the women receive much the largest share of attention, and this is just as it should be. It is rather significant of the material of the 13th regiment that 'Miss' receives so large a Suddenly they started, and quickly raised share of the letter-writing patronage. All right."

12 It is proposed that Congress shall no In the midst of the thousant sounds of the longer be known as the "national bear gar-tempest, a cry had struck fielr car. This den"—the bears having seconded.

"Oh!" Marksman shouted, as he rose in his stirrups, and closed his fists in fury, "that "Whoever he is, we must save him," Bright They had understood each other. At the risk of being carried off by the tor-

" The demon interferes," Marksman said

"Help!" the stranger replied, in a shaking

There was no time for besitation, for every

The man and horse struggled courageously against the torrent that bore them away, and the hunters' resolution was formed in a second. They silently shook hands, and at the same moment dug their spurs into their horses' flanks; the animals reared with a shrick of pain, but, compelled to obey the iron hands that held them, they bounded in " Each man his own," Marksman said, laonically.

The Canadian took the reata banging at the saddle bow, and swinging it round his head, awaited the gleam of the next flash. It did not last long, but though it was so rapid, Brighteye had taken advantage of the transient gleam to hurl his reata. The leather cord whizzed out, and the running knot at watching for the opportunity to fire, "pa-Suddenly he pulled the trigger, the bullet shall know who the scamp is," and throwing his rifle behind him, he hurried forward to The horse the Canadian had lassoed, feel-sessed by these noble animals, the efforts leaped from their saddles, and rushed toward the stranger's horse.

prolongel man con-

ie la forced everything

o other re-ir hands to n their turn

g and des

he rose in fary, "that

m," Bright-

Vhere was

Who could mentally

s to enter

necks of chess was

e let this

Crossed

ita fugi

orseman is of the shaking or every ay, and n a se-

their with a my the ded in riends, water

cound

anger

horse

I, and

d, la-

it the t did

apid,

nt at led;

the

*88 let

en leaned

PRILADELPHIA, SATERDAY, JANUARY 4, 1862.

REJECTED COMMUNICATIONS - We cannot undertake to return rejected communica-

MRS. WOOD'S NOVELET. We design commencing this story in a week or two. Our readers, we trust, will patiently wait and quietly hope" for that

The English Difficulty Settled.

Our readers will see by the extracts from a correspondence between Mr. Seward and Lord Lyons, in another column, that our government has d savowed the action of Capt, Wilkes, and given orders that Mason and Slidell shall be given up. The following article-written before the news of the settlement came-probably is still worthy the attention of our readers.

There is one important fact in the difficulty with Great Britain relative to the seizure of Mason and Slidell, that it would be well for the American people to remember :- the verdict of Europe appears to be against us.

That the English papers, with scarcely an exception, take the ground that we are decidedly wrong in this matter, is not much to be wondered at. Nations are ant to be more than a little prejudiced in their own favor. But the press of France and of Ger-many appear to take sides against us with an almost equal degree of unauimity.

Now, in coming to a conclusion as to whe ther the course of Capt. Wilkes is sanctioned by the law of nations, the opinion of nations anti-English French papers comment upon which have no direct interest in the matter should receive the utmost attention. For we must remember that, as an interested party, our own view may not be of the clearest and of our own principles and precedents, howmost impartial character.

We have yet to see the first intimation in an American paper, that we should adhere to formly protested. our own act, right or wrong. The nearly, if not quite universal sentiment, is opposed to endorsing the seizure of the Rebel Commissioners, if such seizure should be found to be in disregard of the rights of England under the law of nations.

France, it is well known, has of late years sided with the United States, in advocating the restriction of the right of search in time of peace-and it is evident that she now looks upon our course as in violation of the spirit, if not the letter of the doctrines uniformly held hitherto by our government. Hear the Paris Patrie, for instance—a journal which is supposed to speak unofficially for the Emperor, and which has never been particularly friendly to England. That paper ys in a recent article, which created a marked sensation in Paris :--

" What will now be the attitude of France? "What will now be the attitude of France? In our opinion it will be difficult for her to remain indifferent in presence of a violation of international law which interests all maritime nations. We are inclined to believe that the government of the northern states will refuse to recognize the justice of the claims of England; and in that case we may anticipate that war will be declared, and that anticipate that war will be declared, and that the recognition of the southern states will be the first act of hostility by England. We have not hitherto concealed our opinion on the American conflict, but we had no right, whilst stating the reasons for that opinion, to anticipate what would be the resolution of the Emperor's government. At present, however, we think we may venture to say that we do not understand how the pretensions of the Cabinet of Washington can be defended. The different states of the confederation, as is known, enjoy an existence of their own: anticipate that war will be declared, and that is known, enjoy an existence of their own; that is to say, are free and independent—have their separate and distinct legislatures, finan-ces and administrations—possess, in a word, autonomy; and because some of them, in the exercise of their liberty, think fit to form themselves into a separate confederation, the North is to assume that it had the right to bind them eternally to it? They could not separate from it, says the North; but in that case what becomes of their liberty? " " "

The bloodshed, the excesses of all kinds, and case what becomes of their liberty? * * * *

The bloodshed, the excesses of all kinds, and still more the interests and will of the South, have sanctioned separation, and no human power can now reconstitute what has been destroyed. It is time to stop n fratricials were which threatens to run the vital elements of the little countries, and thereby compromise the rest. two countries, and thereby compromise the wel-fire of other nations. French commerce already suffers receively from this state of things; and if it is difficult for England to support the inerruption of commercial relations with America, the situation of France is no better, and the injury she sustains is not less con-siderable. We are profoundly convinced that the war between the northern and southern states, if the two countries were left to themselves, would be interminable; and on the serves, would be interminable; and on the other hand, we cannot under any pretext remain disinterested spectators of a conflict between North America and England. Evidently France is not called upon to avenge the insults received by England; but as the recognition of the South by that Power would lead to a definitive division of the United States it cannot be an isolated as a second or server. lead to a definitive division of the United States, it cannot be an isolated act, and would impose on France an equally decisive attitude in that question. The result would be that the two great maritime powers of Europe might be led into a common action, and have the same political object. That being so, President Lincoln, in ordering an act of brutality, has perhaps given a proof of foresight, by preparing a separation which at the present moaring a separation which at the present in-cent he can neither propose nor accept."

In a second article it says:-

The Councillors of the Crown in England have justly decided that the act committed by the san Jacinto was a volation of the in-ternational law. In our opinion they are quite right. We will say more—it appears to the great maritime nations can ts that the great maritime nations can ble a rebellion which exposes so that different to a question which to the danger of national humiliar cident that such a precedent cannot be admitted by any one. • • • If the envoys the very existence of the R-public tel by any one. * * If the envoys of the South were fugitives, leaving their country for any cause whatever, did not the flag of England over them? Con England or France permit a violation on their territory or France permit a ciolation on their territory of the great principles of hospitality which are practised to all places sheltered by their flags? And on a vessel at sen, an Englishman, like the Frenchman, is on his own soil—such is the Frenchman, is on his own soil—such is the process of t men be invoked in the present case? Another question: If the Americans had the right to carry off by force the envoys of the South, in the passage from 8t. Thomas, a Danish posterior procession, to the Hayana, a Spanish one, would they not have had also the right to carry off the South, in the passage from 8t. Thomas, a Danish posterior procession, to the Hayana, a Spanish one, would they not have had also the right to carry off the South in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have appeared in the Mary of the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have appeared in the Carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have appeared in the Carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South, in the London Times and other anti-they not have had also the right to carry off the South have appeared in the carry of the South have appeared in the carry surdity is demonstrated. England has, therefore, the incontestible right to make herself respected, and we shall applaud all that may be done to protect international law, which seems to us too much disregarded.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

Our readers will note that one weak point in our case is our attempt to justify American action by English law and precedents, instead of being true to our own principles. Thus another French journal, the Paris Debute, says:-

France apart, there is no government that has protested with so much perseverance and energy (as America) against the proceedings of the English navy and of the justice of Great Britain touching the principles of an equitable and liberal maritime law for all nations. In 1813, even, the United States undertook, in defence of those principles, a war which did them much honor, but which for bids them now to revive on their own ac count the evil practices which they then combated. The search of the Trent, even were it legal, which we think it cannot be, and were it regal, which we think it cannot be, and were it not an act absolutely to be condemned, would still appear inexplicable on the part of a Power so accessively jeolous of the respect due to its flag. Who, since the peace, has shown more susceptibility on that point? Who has been on every occasion more litigious, more ex-acting, and more disagreeable with other Powers, when the overline owner under disagreeable acting, and more disagreeable with other Powers, when that question came under discussion? Who preferred leaving facilities for the slave trade rather than admit the right of searching their ships, even in the restricted limits of the gulf of Guinea? Who refused the liberal principles of the Congress of Paris, while assuming the air of asking for still more? And what did the United States ask? Why, that henceforth every merchantan should be, even in time of war, declared inviolable and exempt from all the consequences of a state of war?

Our readers will see by the above quota tions, in what spirit influential and even this matter. They will also see that no fine spun distinctions will be able to convince the French that we have not acted in violation ever conformable to those English once against whose arbitrary spirit we have uni-

Senator Hale, in a recent unwise speech in the Senate, is reported to have said :-

If we had war with England it would be for the same cause that had sent one king to the block, and another homeless and house-less over the world, and one that would ap-peal to men wherever the English language was spoken. He believed, too, that if Napo-leon had one desire more than another, it was to wipe out the stain on the French arms at Waterloo. All over Canada there were thousands of Irishmen who would rush to arms to sustain such a cause. Our principle was our great strength, and if war must come we would say let it come, and thank God that we were the instruments in His hands to work out His own cause.

We trust that when, if ever, we have war with England, it will be truly for some great cause, some great principle, and one that will appeal to men wherever not only the English language, but any language at all is spoken. We do not wish, however, to go to war upon a question, in which—so far as the naked, ab stract right is concerned—the English have, we fear, the American and liberal side.

As to any expectations of important aid from France or Ireland, Schator Hale may read in the Paris papers that the French think we are wrong—and in the proceedings of the recent Irish peace-meeting in Dublin, that the chairman of that meeting think about as highly of the Southern rebels as he does of the United States: looking upon them both us very dear friends, and advising them very coolly and complacently to kiss and make up.

The testimony of Gen. Scott, according to the N. Y. Brening Post, is as follows :-

The General, who has had unusual oppor The General, who has had undersal oppor-tunities of ascertaining the convictions of eminent men abroad, and of judging what course will be taken by Logland and France, is profoundly impressed with the danger of the breaking out of hostilities between Eng-land and the United States at a very early tieres that whatever action may be taken by the latter, will at least operate against us in the event of an appeal to arms. The General, it may be added, is much gra-tified with al.

The General, it may be sensed, as many posi-tified with what more appears to be the posi-tion of our government, and regards the pro-spect of a pesceable adjustment of the diffi-culty as much better than it had seemed to be in Europe.

For our own part, we firmly believe that peace will be maintained. We do not believe that England wishes war, and we think that our own government will avoid any resort to hostilities if it can possibly be done without national humiliation. When the British people learn that an smicable temper rules on this side of the ocean, and that we have had no intention of insulting their flag, goading them into a war, they will recover their own temper, and begin to look at the whole affair from a more reasonable point of

One truth, however, we should gather from this unpleasant affair - and that is the necessity of putting down the Rebellion as speedily as possible. While it exists, the chances of difficulties arising with both France and Eng. land are greatly increased. Peace abroad will be best maintained by crushing our encmies at home. Therefore let us not slacker in our efforts to suppress as rapidly as possible a rebellion which exposes us constantly to the danger of national humiliation, and even menaces through foreign complications the principle. Can the exceptions made for contraband of war, or for assistance by armod insuit. This impression is probably to be at falt, and the longest deplored.

they not have and also the right to carry off American sheets, with the object of injuring by force Southern envoys in a passage from Dover to Caisia? It is by absurdity that above to Caisia? It is by absurdity that above to Caisia? English, seeing the Horold's articles constantly copied, judge that it is an influential of rebeis in the state, except along the south organ of American public opinion; and hold the country responsible for the unprincipled editorials of the most inconsistent and un-principled sheet in the Union. We candidly pelieve that had it not been for the bitter articles in the Heroid, and their regular repub-lication in England by the journals opposed to the American Union, the excitement relative to the search of the Trent would have been much less bitter and violent. It is an instance of the truth of the old saying, that even a gnat can sting a lion to madness

THE GOLDEN MOMENT. The Hon, Schuyler Colfax writes from

tory of the world is full of instances where military commanders, by taking advantage of a momentary panic of the enemy, have effected the most surprising results.

But it needs the eye of genius to see such openings, and the daring arm of genius to ecomplish them. Men who are always apprehending defeat and more Bull Runs, will never accomplish anything without a vast superiority of force. Putting aside the recent successful movements of Gen. Pope, there can scarcely be shown a single proof of the possession of military genius on either side in the whole course of the present war. Gen. Pope's recent capture of the rebel forces in Missouri, certainly does look a little as if he was something more than a merely safe and prudent commander. Sigul also has shown some indications of possessing the true mili-tary eye. What Fremont is, the abrupt official close put to his campaign in Missouriwhen only a week or two more would have enabled the country to decide upon his abilities-renders it unable for any one to say. It is no slight matter to miss these favor able opportunities-for they do not often return. In civil and political as in military affairs, if the proper moment-the golden opportunity-passes by, it may not come again for a generation. That cautious prudence which verges on timidity and coward ice, is thus, in times of commotion and 'trou ble, often even more to be dreaded than rash

There is a class of statesmen and military commanders, whose fatal delusion seems to be that it is always safe to do nothing. They seem to think that though by inaction they gain nothing, they also lose nothing. And all the time they are drifting past golden moments, providential opportunities, into a wide and deepening sea of trouble and difficulty. We fear greatly that our civil and military leaders are in danger of adopting this apparently prudent and cautious, but really dangerous and unsafe policy.

CHARLESTON.

Charleston seems to be pretty effectually blockaded at last. Seventeen old whalers laden with Yankee granite, have been sunk in the principal channel in the following man STORM-KING.

OCEAN-WAVE. SWIFTSCHE.
The tides will, it is believed, in a short time

orm over vessels sunk in the above manner a perfectly impassable bar, and one that no artificial or natural means will be likely to we should go to war with John Bull rather remove. No attempt has been made to close than yield a single point. One of them winds artificial or natural means will be likely to the smaller channels, as the water of the rivers must find a vent somewhere.

With a large portion of it consumed by fire, and its main outlet by sea thus blocked up, Charleston will probably become, in a few years, an American Tyre. And the wise and good shall may of it, as they contemplate its charred and desolate ruins :-

"Surely I will make thee a wilderness, and

"And I will prepare destroyers against thee down thy choice codars, and east them into the

And many nations shall pass by this city, and very man to his neighbor. Where ore hath the Lord done thus unto this great

Then they shall answer, Because they have orsaken the covenant of the Lord their too nd worshipped other gods and served them We unto him that buildeth his house by unth his neighbor's service without wager, an

PRINCE ALBERT.

The death of Prince Albert seems to have een very sudden and unexpected. His los will be greatly regretted by the English pe ple, for a more unexceptionable musband for heir Queen could scarcely have been found. Mindful of the natural jeaborsy of the Eng lish people in relation to foreign influence he took no public part in politics, although it is very probable that he wielded a private influence of considerable potency There is no doubt that a large portion of Albert was a generous patron of many libe the English people honestly believe that we ral, benevolent and artistic enterprises, and them into a war, and that the Mason and plary husband and father. In his own do Sildell affair was intended as the crowning in stic circle his loss will be the most deeply

MISSOURI.

We are glad to hear from Missouri that Premont's policy of clearing out the rebels is again substantially adopted, and that for ward and not backward movements are once more in fashion. When Fremont was recalled, there was scarcely an armed body of rebels in the state, except along the southern border. Since then, four rebel recruiting offices have been opened in Lexington, the North Missouri railroad has been destroyed for miles, and all things relapsed into the condition that they were when Fremont first moved from Sedalia. Here is an extract moved from Sedalia. Here is an extract from a letter written on the 15th uit, by an fractions, as traditionally interpreted by our covernment, has received a new sanction. old citizen of south west Missouri :-

"Look at ruined Missouri! Fremont did "Look at ruined Missouri! Fremont did more in two months than all the rest have done since the war broke out, yet be was re-moved, and the army turned back. Want of provisions was the ples, but Price can find provisions plenty upon the same ground. He has robbed south-west Missouri along three different routes, and now I fear he will rob-south-east Kansas, almost in sight of our troops.

Washington as follows:

Reliable information has reached here, that after the descent of our troops on Port Royal and the retreat of the robels, the Mayor and people of Charleston determined to surrender their city, rather than allow it to be burned. But our army did not know this; and now, instead of the glorious banner of the Republic waving over the walls of Sumter, the people are building, with the aid of their slaves, miles of fortifications to resist our advance upon the city, and have forced into the ranks of their Home Army there, large bodies of men who have hitherto kept aloof from the struggle.

We know not how much dependence is to be placed upon the above. But a wise and daring commander in Sherman's place, would probably have captured either Charleston or Savannah,—or, perhaps both cities. The history of the world is full of instances where

The last advices inform us that the rebel have been again driven by Gen. Pope south of the Osage, and that Price is again retreating towards Arkansas. We trust not only that this is true—but that the country once more won, will be held. We felt convinced at the time, that the backward movement made after the removal of Fremont, was a most lamentable piece of folly; but civilians can my little to such things when done under the plea of military policy, but have to wait and note the results. Those results, we judge, have convinced nearly everybody by this time, that the policy in question was a de plorably bad one, alike in its bearings upon the general campaign, and upon the unfortunate Unionists of south-western and cen tral Missouri.

WORDS OF CHEER.

We cannot pretend to do more than a knowledge in this wholesale and unsatisfac tory manner, the many kind and complimen tary words that we have found in our letters of late. We beg the writers not to think however, that such kindly words are wasted because not publicly referred to. Only occasionally does it suit to quote such testime nials of approval in our columns. Thus an Ohio lady, while renewing her subscription.

I was almost tempted to write to you while reading the Mystery, to tell you how delight exI was with it, how much we all loved dear Anne Hereford; only our cheeks did tingle when she would go poking into that West Wing. And we are sure yet that it was Edwin Barley who committed the mur-

Mr. Editor, those badies in Vermont and Indiana cannot begin to appreciate you as we do, unless they live in a retired country village, where the arrival of The Post is the event of the week. Hoping it may continue a thousand years, with many thousand fold its present number of subscribers, I remain

To the many subscribers who have exerted themselves, and are new exerting themselves to increase the circulation of Tue Post, out warmest thanks are due. They show by their works that they are friends indeed and, of all words of cheer, none are more cheering than those which come in the shape

VERY CONSIDERATE. The rebel newspa pers in Richmond, are very fearful lest our government should sacrifice its honor in the present difficulty with England. They think up with saving that what they the rebelmost need at present is a fleet. It is gene rally good policy to disappoint your one

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A TREATISE ON ORDNANCE AND NAVA GUNNERY. Compiled and arranged as a Test Book for the U. S. Naval Academy. By Locat EDWARD SIMPSON, U.S. Navy. Second ed. tion, revised and enlarged. Published by D. Van Nostrand, New York; and for sale b J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, Pro-

YOU SO BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, OF The Right Read Through Life A Boy's Book on a Boy's Own Subject. By Heser Mannes, author of the Pensant Boy Philosopher, & Published by Harper & Bros., New York and for sale by J. B. Lippincott & Co., Phila

THE NEW AMERICAS CYCLOPADIA Edit ed by George Ripley and Charles A. Dana Volume XIII Part Redwitz, Publishe thy D Appleton & Co. New York and London John McParlan, 33 South Sixth street, Philis elphia, agent

TALES OF A GRANDE STREET. SIX Volumes By Sir Walter Scott An edition uniform with Tiesnor & Facility Waverly Novels Published by Ticknor & Fields, Boston and for sale by T. B. Peterson, Philadelphia.

Prince knowing for the most part stones founded will be slow to run up others.

approval of every member of the Cabinet. The National Intelligencer says:—"The law of nations, as traditionally interpreted by one government, has received a new sanction, though at the cost, it may, of some national sensibility, waked into disproportionate activity by the temporary exacerbations of civil feuds. The latter, let us remember, are but for a day—the law of nations is for all thas."

The despatch from Earl Russell, her Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State for Poreign Affairs, after reciting the circumstances under which he understood the capture of these parties to have been made, proceeds to characterize it as an outrage on the British, flag, and after expressing the hope and belief that it had not been authorized by our government, asks a reparation appropriate to such an aggression, that the four gentlemen designated should be released, that an spology should be given for what the British government deems an affront to her flag.

In responding to this demand, Mr. Seward, after reviewing the circumstances under which the arrest was effected, according to the report of our naval officers and thus developing the inaccuracies and omissions of the British statements, proceeds to analyze the facts and principles of public law involved in the case, and arrives at the conclusion that the neglect of Capt. Wilkes, parily voluntary as it was on his pari, to bring the Trent in for trial as a lawful prize, may be justly held to operate as a forfeiture of the beligerent right of capture accruing under the laws of nations, and that the government in for trial as a lawful prize, may be justly held to operate as a forfeiture of the beligerent right of capture accruing under the laws of nations, and that the government has hall be made of the prisonner taken into custody of Capt. Wilkes, under circumstances believed to be justly open to exception on both the grounds thus indicated. So far as regards the apology asked by the British government, none is tendered, because a simple statement of the facts as they are ever in the premises, while the proceeding of Capt. Wilkes in so far as it fails to accrue to the benefit of his government, and to conform to the rules of public law, was dic-tated by cosiderations of kindness and for-

Mr. Seward in conclusion says.—"If I de-cide this case in favor of my own govern-ment, I must disavow its most cherished principles, and reverse and forever abandon its essential policy. The country cannot af-ford such a sacrifice. If I maintain those principles and adhere to that policy, I must surrender the case itself. It will be seen, therefore, that this government could not deny the justice of the claim presented to us in this respect upon its merits. its respect upon its merits

"We are asked to do to the British nation first, what we have always insisted that all nations ought to do to us. The claim of the British government is not made in a discourcous manner. This government since it test organization has never used more guard of inguage in a storiar case. In coming to my conclusion I have not longosten that if he safety of this Union required the descetion of the captured persons, it would be the right and duty of this government to detain them; but the effectual check and waning ared persons themselves, when dispussion tely weighed, happing forbid me from resort

"Nor am I aware that American chizens are not in any case to be unnecessarily sur-rendered, for any purpose, into the keeping of foreign States. Only the captured per-sons, however, and others who are interested the that which is now before us.

Those cases occurred when Great Britain, as well as the I nated states, was the home of generations which, with all their peculiar in terest and passions, have passed away. She could, in no other way, so effectually disavow any such apary as we think she has done us by assuming now, as her own, the ground upon which we then stood. It would will little for our own claims to character of a just and magnantinous people if we should usistency and national conscience compet to regard as a claim internationally right. "Putting behind me all suggestions of the ind, I prefer to express my satisfaction by the adjustment of the present case up-primitate confessedly American, and yet, I trent naturally satisfactory to both the n-terus tencerned, a question especially as-rightly settled between them which, herebfore, exhausting not only all the burns of peaceful discussion, but the arbitrarient of war itself for more than half a century, alamated the two countries from each other, are perpecsed with lears and appreciations of other nations.

"The four persons in question are now held in military custody at Fort Warren, it the State of Massa busetts. They will be therefully aberated. Your Lordship will please indicate a time and place for receiving very high consideration.

"I avail myself of this occasion to offer to your Lordship a netword assurance of my very high consideration.

"West H. Sawento"

"West H. Sawento"

"Here follows a letter from M. Thouvene the French Minister of State and the repl of Mr. Seward. The French Minister's le ter sets high the facts of the arrest, an ints out the dangers it involves and argoing planes with the demands of the British to even ment, and Mr. Seward replact before M. Triunvenella departs had been Lamis Lyune to Mis Sewant.

THE TRENT AFFAIR SETTLED.

NAME AND SAMELE TO BE SIVEN IP.

THE ADVICE OF FRANCE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. The National Intelligencer, of this morning, has the official telligencer, of the relational forms of the servent of the servent.

LATEST NEWS.

ANOTHER RESEL DEFEAT.—NEW HUNDRED AND FIFTY KILLED AND WOUNDED—TRIBET

FIFTY KILLED AND WOUNDRD—TERRY-FIVE PRISONERS.

PALMYSA, Dec. 29.—Yesterday, General Prenties, with 450 mes, encountered and dis-persed a body of rebels 800 strong under Gen. Dorsey, at Mount Zion, Boone county, killing and wounding 150 of them, and en-turing 35 prisoners, 85 horses, and 103 guas. Our loss was only 5 killed, and 11 wounded. The rebels burned another train on the North Missouri Railroad on Saturday, and say that they lutend to destroy all the cars on the road, to prevent it from being used during the present winter.

LATER FROM BEAUPORT, S. C.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The aterner Em-pire City has arrived. She left Beaufort on the 24th and Port Royal on the 35th inst. The 79th New York regiment had made a reconnoissance fifteen miles from Beaufort,

The 79th New York regiment and more a reconnoissance fifteen miles from Beaufort, capturing six rebels.

Our troops are still building entrenchments on Tybee island, while Fort Pulsaki kept a continual fire on them without damage.

A rebel boat which had come down the Warsaw channel to reconnoitre, was chased and driven ashore by a gamboat, and two of her crew captured. The officers and two of her crew captured. The officers and crews of the stone fleet sunk in Charleston harbor have returned to New York.

Wassilvorow, Dec. 28.—The rebels have raised a secession flag on Pohick church, and a large force under Gen. Jameson, consisting of seven Pennsylvania regiments, has gone to remove it at all hazards.

FORTHESS MONROE, Dec. 28.—The following news is gleaned from the Richmond papers.

ing news is gleaned from the Richmond papers.
CHABLESTON, Dec. 27.—The Courier of this morning states that the Yankee gunboats exchanged a few shots with the Cole Island battery yesterday.
Other despatches received at Richmond from Charleston state that a Federal fleet of twelve gunboats passed up to White Point, on the North Edisto river, and made a demonstration on Gen. Evans's forces. Reinforcements had been sent to Gen. Evans, and a battle was expected soon.

orcements and been sent to tren. Evana, and a battle was expected soon. Other demonstrations had also been made on the beautiful of the beautiful of the beautiful of the Five Union gunboats anchored off Cois-island last night, and a battle was expected

John G. Davis, a member of the Federal John G. Davis, a member of the Federal John S. Tom the Seventh District of La-diana, has arrived at Hopkinaville, Ky., on his way to Richmond, but for what purpose it is not stated.

A dispatch dated Nashville, the 25th, says that Tom Crittenden, with twelve thousand men, were within forty miles of Hopkinsville, Ky., and would advance upon that place

SUSPENSION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS On Monday, the 30th, the New York Banks

spended specie payments.
The Philadelphia Banks followed suit. The heavy drafts on their coin caused by their large advances to the government render this step, in their judgment, necessary. We presume it will be quite generally followed in the large cities, though the drain upon the City Banks results from causes which tend tather to strengthen than weaken the Banks of the interior.

WARLIKE ENTERPRISE

Napoleon remarked at St. Helena :- " Generais are rarely found eager to give battle, they choose their positions, establish them selves, consider their combinations, but then commences their indecision; nothing is so difficult, and at the same time so important,

Wellington and - The fault with most ness in taking the last step to bring on a bat tle, especially when armies are large, arising from deep moral anxieties, and, after all, the uncertaining of the leaner apterally speaks of "our occurity depending in a want of interprese in the enemy." and says that "we have been in blited for our salety during a greater part of the war, to lived in his mild and ungnificent eye, Learned his great language, caught his clear a

Made him our pattern to hive and to die! to a night heating led him never come back t There would be doubt, healtstion and pair Foresel process on our part the climines of two

Accordial confident morning again

13" Living was cheap enough in olden ine. Sorrites was supposed to have lived join an income of seventy five dollars, but he fixed weare than a slave. His cost was studbly, and he were the same earment winter and summer; he went barefooted; his he I fend was bread and water, and as he engaged in no business to mend his estate of parame, it is not wonderful that his wife wolded Demosthenes, his sister and their mother paid for their board 4 05 a year, and provided the house into the barrain.

Trick a many an empty craffe Three mans a leteronic beach, Where my and light have fled

For third in every graveyard

And every hillock represents L# The latter gall of secondonism some-

Leady Lyons for Ma. Sawalle.

We same stores, Dec. 27, 1901.

The Have the courage to hear what your enemies say of you. They are secrets worth knowing - for the most, part stories founded upon fact.

Have the courage to carry a cheap mode of a you will discover why when you lose in the fact of the fact of the removal of Mr. Easte from the Entish and your professional men, and to pay them, you portant communication which you take made portant communication which you have made to pay them, you portant communication which you have made to pay them, you portant communication which you have made to pay them, you have made to pay the many part of the same substitute that the following the quick with the tangue of woman; yet thus droped to not be quick with the Union in some collisquies the quick with the Union in some collisquies the quick with the Union in the sense collisquies the quick with the Union is some collisquies the quick with the Curion is some collisquies the quick in some collisquies the quick with the Union is some collisquies the quick with the Union is some collisquies the quick with the Curion is some collisquies the quick with the Curion in some collisquies the quick with the Curion is some collisquies the quick with the Curion is some collisquies to a sense collisquies the same collisquies the same collisquies the same collisquies the quick with the convents of the result with the convents of the Have the courage to ask for the bills of the Majosty's Government a copy of the important communication which you have made to pay them, you perfant communication which you have made to not be pay them, you perfant communication which you have made to not see the necessity for your passing up

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, JANUARY 4 1862.

NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS OF THE

SATURDAY EVENING POST FOR 1862.

A happy New Year, patrons' May it be A happier than the last for Liberty! Pray God the young strong year, fresh from His band.

May see the fiend cast out from our loved land, Whose wild and wicked will was almost done In this of eighteen he dred sixty-one—
This fateful year, born in the gathering gloom The stormy blackness of the coming doom; Men crying Peace! while none the land coul gain, With poison rioting in every rein Stupendous fraud, and perjury, and theft, In secret wrought, the bonds of Union reft; Still slept the North, bulf-roused by lurid gleams Struggling uneasily with nightmare dreams, Till the great wakening shock the shot and Bursting o'er Sumter, broke the fatal spell, And "Bleep no longer-dream of peace t more!

Was thundered on us with continuous roas Those days of siege—the nation held its breath, While tresson's direct enginery of death Descended on the brave and loyal few That Anderson drew round him, staunch and true.

Then Sumter fell. The bannered stars angust. The dear old Flag, was trailing in the dust! How did that word like fire electric run Through the stunned heart of every patriot sor The whole North-land as one strong man uprose To battle to the death with Freedom's foes. From Maine's cold rocks to California's shore Her hosts are marshalled for the hely war; Fier noble wives and methers keep not back

A troop whose silence earth can never break, Such royal souis as death was proud to take. With mien of solemn joy are gliding by, Their country's havers, glad for her to die. Young Ellsworth, with his quick and flery seal, His boy-heart enger for the clash of steel, His splendid dreams of prowess for the right, Struck down upon the threshold of the fight. And Greble, standing firm in honor's place, Foreshadowing sadness on his German face That "some one blundered" could not be his brings; Sweet is the incense of such offerings! A life, with all its opening promise fair Its culture ripening into fruitage rare, Upon the altar laid, unfaitering, And caught up quickly, as a precious thing

Simply with strong right arm to do and dare. onored Puritan name young Winthrop

New was riflees on Potomac's banks ! Our best and bravest swell the silent ranks One leads there on where holdest deeds at

Whom Peppeylyania proudly calls her sen. Whose grand, true heart, and brain of clearnes

And el-quent tongue, our councils lesst could

Lamonted Baker! luckless was the day That massed thy noble force with common clay.

What heart but shares that mother's bitter cup, With tenderest, noblest nurture rearing up. To manhood's strength, a princely soul and true Like Sydney living, like him dying, too, Craving in vain the eweet, warm, human part of the fair spirit nestling in her heart His last words as in amber laying by, " In such a cause, it is not hard to die!"

But on Missouri's dark and bloody ground, On Springfield's fatal plain a gallant band, 'Mid fore o'erwhelming, take their perilou

The pitying beavens that saddest sight behold, Frue men borne down by traitors bad and bold Vainly their chief for success wildly prays, And sweeps the gory field with anguished gaze, Into that stream of brave men perishing, His life was flung, an unregarded thing, And grief, as for their dearest friend's farewell, ote on the people's heart when Lyon fell

Hark ! from the South a heavy, ominous roar, The Union thunders at her guilty door. Upon the very spot where transon nurst And warmed to venemous life her broad as

The nation's might strikes doublits proud I; "but if you can direct me to a lodging, I

Triumphant shouts announce Port Royal free, Rectained to glorious law and liberty Her beautiful harbor open to the world, Above her fort the starry flag unfuried At Beaufort, Hatterns, our ships are lying, Our banner o'er their conquered strongholds

And thus begins the end-for freedom's form Swift shame and woe inexorably treading Where er rebellion kindred blood is shedding The Old Dominion grown a stale offence, None new so poor to do her reverence— Dismembered, desciate, her glories o'er, Among her starry sisters named no more More proud and fair, to freedom consecrate Vain their fond dream of captured Baltimore; Hold fast their precious right among the free; Kentucky's gallant land has struggled out From the base alloy of her rebel rout, And takes at last her firm, defiant stand Facing the South with resolute, lifted han-Missouri wrestles yet in mortal strife. For all her suffering sons hold dear in life Her fields are wasted, tilled in doubt and feat Her night glooms heavy, but the dawn is nea

A land so rich in all things great and high, For which such martyr spirits smiling die, Will surely work out a triumphant ending Of this great tribulation Heaven is sending To purge us of our sins. Are not the ten Righteons among our guilty once again To save the justly doomed? So let us trust, And pray that soon this warfare's bloody dust With living water cleansed, pure for all time, America may lift her front sublime So fair that every land its strife shall cease Before the radiant, conquering smile of Peace

LOST PROPERTY OFFICE.-Old Fog-Is this the office to recover lost property?" Clerk-" Yes." Old Fog-"Then, could you recover for me my cotton pocket-handker chief? It has two knots tied in it that mean all sorts of things, and I'm terribly afraid that somebody will find them out !"

A NIGHT ADVENTURE IN PARIS.

It was during the first months of my resi lence in Paris, in the days of Charles X., and nearly five and-thirty years ago. I had been to take a farewell dinner, and a temperate glass or two of Medoc, with a fellow-townsman and reighbor of mine, who was on the point of returning to the paternal roof in iomersetabire. He had been studying medicine and the elements of practical chemistry for the last year, under the watchful eye of his uncle, a pharmacien in the Place Vendome, and it was there, in a small sky lighted back room behind the shop, which fronted Napoleon's Triumphal Column, that we had our modest symposium. I was loth to part with him, he had been so true a friend; he it. was who crammed me with colloquial French the popular idioms of the Parisian highways; who made me acquainted with all the ins and outs the by ways and the short cuts of old Lutetia, and taught me how to solve the difficult problem of cutting my coat according to my cloth, which, in those days, was unfortunately very scanty indeed.

It is not much to be wondered at that I forgot the lapse of time, and that, when at length I screwed myseif up to the pitch of away, it should be verging towards the small hours of the morning. In truth, it was on the point of striking one when I left the house, and before I had well got clear of the broad " Place," the hour had struck.

At any other time I should not have cared straw about this, but have walked on quietly to my lodging in the Rue Richelieu; but now I knew that would be of no use. That old concentrated essence of verjuice, Ganache, the porter, to save himself a little trouble, had detained my letters of a morning till I came down, instead of sending them by the gare to my room, on the fourth floor, and I had quarrelled with him in consequence, and given notice to quit at the end of my month. ince our quarrel he had used me savagely, and I knew he was no more likely to let me in after one o'clock than he was to pay my

This reflection brought me to a stand still What should I do? Where should I go? To increase my chagrin it began to rain in a rather sharp shower. Instinctively I faced about, ran across the Place, and got under shelter of the piazzas in the Rue de Castiglione, just in time to save myself from a drenching torrent which burst on the streets like a waterspout. I was walking up and down in the dark, ta king counsel of myself, until the storm should cease, when I stumbled and tripped of a pillar.

"Is that you, Janin ?" said a rather whining voice, which seemed to proceed from some one in the act of waking from sleep,

"No," said I, "it isn't Janin; who at you, and why are you lying here at this time

"Un pauvre avengle!" said he: "I au waiting here for my comrade, who is gone to the spectacle. You see, M'sieu Janin is fond of the spectacle, and while he is getting his fill of it, I take my pastime on the cold

I thought it but a grim sort of joke, and told him I should think better of Janin if he were more considerate for his friend.

The poor blind wretch did not agree with ne, and, to my surprise, began vindicating the character of Janin.

"You see, M'sieu," he said, "if I am blind lanin has good eyesight, and why should be not enjoy it? he may as well be blind as I, it he is to see nothing. One should not be selthat although one is unfortunate."

While he was speaking, and I was inward ly admiring his simple magnanimity, Janin ame up at a quick pace, and chanting a lively

"What, my old philosopher! so you have ompany," he said; "I am afraid I must dis turb your conference

"Make no apology for that, I pray," said shall feel obliged."

You are English," said Janin : "there is an English house in the Rue de l'Odron, which is always open till two; if you make for the Pont Neuf at once, and step out, you will be there in good time."

"Good night, then, my lads"-and away ! trudged at a round pace for the Pont Neufrossed it in a pelting shower, and made the best of my way to the Rue de l'Odeon. accounted myself fortunate in reaching the house a few minutes before the hour for cle sing the door, but found that I had not so much cause for congratulation as I had ima gined, as the place was full, and the only accommodation the landlady could offer m was a small truckle bed in a two-bedded room. already bespoken for the night by a previou

Being wet through by the rain, and feelly that I should not mend matters by faring further, I was fain to make a virtue of neces sity, and accept the truckle-bed. Moreover, wishing to get out of my damp garments as quickly as possible, I asked for my candle and was forthwith shown to the dormitory. which I found was up four flights of stairs I lost no time in getting between the sheets but had no intention of going to sleep until I knew at least what sort of a subject was to be the companion of my slumbers. So I took a book from my pocket, and, placing my candle on a chair by the bedside, began to read, resolved to keep my light burning and myself awake until the sound of footsteps on the stairs should apprise me of the approach of the stranger. After the lapse of about half-an-hour, the ounds I was listening for approached, and then, clapping the extinguisher on the light, I lay back, half-closed my eyes, and affected

The figure that now entered the room was not at all a fascinating one, to my view at least. He was a man of about five and-thirty jauntily garbed in one of the pea-green, high collared surtouts current among the fast men who affected the Luxembourg quarter of the rest of his garments, seemed to have run all too suddenly to seed. There was something boczy and vicious in the expression of his face, which, spite of a fierce-looking moustache, gave one the idea of meanness and serility, coupled with a reckless kind of brarade, which smacked rather of swagger than of daring, and in every feature there was the impress of debauchery and intemperance. He ntered the room, but finding that I took no otice of it, probably concluded that I was asleep, and so said no more. In less than five minutes he had bundled imself into bed and had put out the light, and after a few minutes more began to give audible tokens of the soundness of his slumbers. Though I had formed the worst opinion of my companion, I did not feel the slightest alarm. He evidently had no hostile purpose; he had no weapon of any kind, not even a stick, and I felt assured that in a personal encounter I could easily master him. Still, there was something in his wandering eye, which never rested for a moment on single spot, that I did not like, and I felt a little annoyed with myself that I had not placed my garments nearer my hand, instead spreading them on chairs in the middle of saying the last adicus, and had torn myself the room, in order to get them dry. These thoughts, however, were but momentary, and n a very brief space I had forgotten every thing in a quiet slumber.

I suppose I may have slept about two hours, and the dawn was just breaking, when was awoke by a slight noise like something falling on the tiled floor of the apartment,-Luckily. I did not start or make the least movement, but, half-opening my eyes, in the till consciousness of the situation, I saw that my companion was in the act of getting out of bed. His movements were so slow and cautious, and noiselessly made, that they used my suspicion, and I watched him narrowly through my seemingly closed lids With the stealthiness of a prowling cat, he got upon his feet, and, with his eyes fixed or me, advanced slowly to the foot of my bed. His object plainly was to be sure that I slept and I took care to betray no signs of wake fulness that might undeceive him. After a statue like watch of a few moments, he seem ed to have assured himself of my slumbers and, turning softly round, thrust his hand into one of the pockets of my pantaloons and, withdrawing the contents, retreated to his bed, carrying the plunder with him,-Here he lay motionless for several minutes watching me attentively the while. At length he raised himself, and drawing a canvas bag from beneath his pillow, deposited within it over somebody lying cronched up at the foot the booty he had seized, replaced it, and lay down, as if to compose himself to sleep, My blood was boiling in my veins at the fellow's impudent robbery, and I felt half inclined to rise and pummel him as he lay, and recover my property. There was no occasion, however, for any hurry; and, reflecting that second thoughts are sometimes best, I lay still, endeavoring to form some plan for doing myself justice, if it might be, without a scene of violence, which might be attended with unpleasant consequences, but fully determined to do battle for my own, if no other alternative presented itself. The contents of the pocket which the fellow had rifled amounted to about three pounds English, all in five-franc pieces, which I had received from my friend of the night before, in final discharge of an accommodation account between us. This was no great sum, to be sure, but it was more than I could then afford to ose; and indeed, the idea of resigning i without a struggle was the last I should have thought of entertaining. While puzzling my brains for some practi cable expedient, which, however, did not present itself. I could not help admiring the calm placidity of the countenance of the vilain who had robbed me, who, from his satisfled expression, seemed to be enjoying the ousness of some good action; but in this I was much deceived. The rascal was no more asleep than I was. If my anxiety and indignation were perplexing me, his apprehensions were at the same moment trouhope of concocting a plan for the recovery of my money without fighting for it, a movement on his part put me in possession of one which had at least the promise of success. I saw him open his eyes suddenly, and fix them full on me; then rising, he withdrew the canvas has once more from beneath his pillow. and stepped out of bed with it in his hand. There stood upon the window sill a withered geranium in a glazed carthenware pot-the plant was a mere-stick, which had dried up and died from want of water. To my amaze ment the thief lifted the plant out of the pot by the stem, raising the earth in which it had grown, and which was all matted together by the roots, along with it; he then deposited the bag in the bottom of the pot, and, replacing the plant, got quietly into bed once more

I saw at once that this move placed the reult of the game very much in my own power and I soon made up my mind how to act. I do not suppose that either of us went to sleep again: and I have often thought since, what a curious study we might have presented to any concealed spectator who should have been in the secret of our relative predicaments during the following two hours or so. I knew, of course, that my light-fingered friend would not think of rising till I was up and gone; having placed his booty where he might reasonably deem it beyond the possibility of discovery, he was doubtless prepared to outface any suspicion or accusation that might be made against him, and therefore he would lie there until he had the field to himself. Accordingly, about seven o'clock I got up, deliberately washed and dressed, and, having finished my toilet, was almost ready to start, being well aware all the while tha the fellow, who was feigning sleep, had his eyes upon me, and was watching for the moment when I should discover my loss. Of course I did not discover it; but when I had drawn on my boots, and was ready to go, I came suddenly aware that the atmosp

Paris of that day, but which surtout, like the of the room was insufferably close, and began been wishing to meet you, and to make a reto puff and blow, and ejaculate interjectional complaints of the want of air; at the next moment I ran to the window, threw it wide with one hand, and leaning forward as if to catch the morning breeze, awkwardly swept off the rings. "These, I think, belong to you-is it flower-pot down into the little court seventy

In an instant the seeming sleeper was standing in his shirt on the middle of the uttered a brief, common place greeting as he floor, and demanding with an angry oath what I had done.

"Nothing," said I, "beyond breaking a flower-pot-the plant was withered and good for nothing. Excuse my awkwardness; I will indemnify the landlady. Good-morn-

My nonchalance deceived the scoundrel and he stood aside to let me pass, looking rather black, however, as I walked out. There seemed to be no one astir in the house save the garcon, who was roasting coffee at the open front door, and I was only made aware of him by the agreeable fumes which assailed my nostrils, as I sped like a grayhound down the stairs. In half a minute ! was in the little back court, where lay the smashed remains of the pot and the withered flower. Feeling morally certain that the shock head and scowling visage of the thief were protruding from the window above, I drew the canvas bag from the crumbled dry mould, and held it up to his gaze. There he was, sure enough, growling and grinding his teeth with rage and mortification.

"Why don't you cry 'Stop thief?" I bawled out to him. " Did you think to catch the Englishman asleep? Au revoir, Coquin! I waited no reply, but, making for the street, jumped into the first flacre that came in view, and in half an hour had alighted at my own lodging. As I was mounting to my apartment, au quatrieme, I met on the stairs my friend and chum Ollendorf, who was sallying forth to meet his morning pupils.

"Halloo!" said he, "you've been out all night?

Yes," said I, " and I've had an adventure. "Good! let me hear all about it.

I told him how I had passed the night, and all that had happened.

"Capital!" he cried; "and have you ex amined the thief's bag ?"

"No, I have not done that yet; but of course it contains nothing but what is my own."

"Do not be too sure of that. Come, we will examine it together." He followed me into my room, and I lugged forth the bag, feeling confident that the fer tile imagination of my philological friend had misled him, as it was apt to do. To my as tonishment there were in the bag, in addition to the money rifled from my pocket, a gold Napoleon, a five-franc piece, and a pair of enormously large circular ear-rings of alloyed gold, such as one often sees in the cars of the provincial immigrants who crowd the wharves, the markets, and warehouses of

"There!" said my friend, "you see that the rascal had more strings to his bow than you gave him credit for. If you had made an uproar and a charge of theft, he could have retorted the charge upon you-would have shown his own empty pockets, and might have stood as good a chance of criminating you as you of criminating him. However, you may forgive him, since he has paid you for the trouble of defeating his purpose; and really, I think he has treated you handsomely.

'Against his will; but, seriously, what ought I to do? had I not better put the affair into the hands of the police?"

"Do you know the rule in such cases here If not, I must tell you that if you put the thief's money into the hands of the police, you will also be compelled to hand over the whole contents of the bag; and how much of it you will get back, and when you will get any, you must be cleverer than I am if you can guess. I finally decided not to trouble the police with the business; but as I could not have made use of the scoundrel's money, any more than I could have worn the huge ear-rings, I wrapped both up in paper together, and placed them in my pocket-book until time and circumstances should present some fit and proper mode of disposing of them.

It was about a year after the above adventure, and when the details of it had almost faded from my memory, that I was invited by a friend from England to accompany him on a visit to one of the Parisian prisons-if I recollect right it was the New Bicetre, which, after a deal of solicitation and trouble he had obtained permission to inspect. While we were wandering through the workshops, in which the prisoners labor together in silence for so many hours a day, as my friend was committing his notes to paper, I amused myself by scanning the demoralized physiogno mies around me, little suspecting that I destined to find an acquaintance among them. Close to my elbow there stood a man at a bench, bending over his work, which that of carving sabots from unshapely blocks of willow wood. I was admiring the rapidity and boldness of his execution, when he suddenly lifted his head and exposed to view the face, which I had formerly studied with such deliberation, of the thief of the Rue de l'Odeon. I knew him at once, and saw that the recognition was mutual, for he lowered his head again instantly, and plainly sought to clude my gaze. I could not, of course, speak to him then, without contravening the rules of the prison; but on imparting my wish to do so to the guide who had us in charge, he promised to give me the opportunity I sought, when we had finished our survey. He was as good as his word, and before leaving the prison I was conducted to the delinquent in his own cell, whither he had been remanded that I might see him. The poor wretch, who, it was clear, imagined that I was going to lodge a fresh charge against him, seemed struck with a mortal pallor as I entered.

"Do not be alarmed," I said; "I have no here complaint to make against you; but I have good, or never.

storation of property which may perhaps be of use to you." I unfolded my pocket-book and took out the little packet containing the Napoleon, the five-franc piece, and the ear-

He bowed assent, but did not speak "Take them," I said, "and take better care of them than you did when you had them last."

He glauced at the attendant, as if to intl nate that the man's presence prevented his saying more, and merely replied, with impressive carnestness, "M'sieu, you are a man

I wished I could return the compliment

HELP.

"Who'll help me ?" Said one with spirit free, Of men and fate defiant, And firm and self-reliant, Who scorned to ask another, Were it a friend or brother, To aid him in the stress Of perils numberless.

"Who'll help me To be a man again. And trample down my pain, And lift mine eyes to heaven Confiding and forgiven?

" I," said the Occan. With all my strength of tides. And the heave of my commotion, Where the wild tempest rides.

"I," said the joyous Earth, "In all my populous girth, From the pole unto the pole, From the east unto the west, I'll aid thee, noble soul, To rise and do thy best!"

"And we," said the Day and Night, And the Law of Gravitation 'And we," said the Dark and the Light,

And the Stars in their gyration. 'And I," said Justice, moving To the right hand of the throne "And I," said Fate, approving, "I make thy cause mine own.

" I knew ye would," said he Who lay in extremity. Strong will, pure soul, true heart-With these to take my part, And God's law siding ever The resolute endeavor, I'll do the best I can And if I die, I die, Strong in my God on high!"

RUSSIAN DISCIPLINE.

Having found a German friend in the head physician of the military hospital at Riga, companied him one morning on his visit thither. On the way he told me how difficult it was to elicit from the men the real seat of their complaints, as every ailing in the upper part of the body, whether in the head, back, or stomach, they call pain in the heart; and those in the lower parts of the body, pain in the leg. Having arrived at the hospital, all the patients that were able to do so, arrayed themselves in a row, dumb and stiff as if on military parade. " How do you feel to-day, old man?" asked the doctor, of the first. "My heart pains," was the expected timid reply. " Tongue out," said the doctor, and out it was. Turning to the next, the same question, same reply, and same tongue operation. More than thirty in the row underwent the same medical inquiries and process. I was about leaving, when my friend told me to look round. To my utter astonishment I saw the whole lot still standing in military attitude, with their tongues wide out. We looked on for awhile, when the doctor loudly gave the word, " Tongues in," and all the articulating organs vanished in an instant. My risible faculties were so excited by the ludicrous scene, that it was some moments after we were in the open street ere I could, rather reproachingly, ask my friend how he could play such a trick on the poor fellows. "You must not judge," said he, "by exceptions. I merely wanted to show you to what extent the blind spirit of discipline prevails among the Russian troops. Nor are the fellows," added he, "the worse for the joke; on the contrary, they believe that the cure is greatly promoted by keeping the tongue out in the presence of the doctor, the longer the better." M.

The gipsics, it is now thought by the learned, did not originate in Egypt, though the name is a corruption of Egyptian. In fact, gipsies are called by a different name in every country in Europe-in France, Bohemians; in Italy, Wallachians, &c. A German author, who has devoted many years to the investigation of the subject, comparing the language and customs of the gipsies with those of other races, arrives at the conclusion that they are of East Indian origin. Their language, character and habits he shows are inmistakably Hindoo.

SUDDEN ACCESSION OF KINDRED. old man named Paddleburn, worth £50,000, who, though he had not a relative in the world, advertised in the papers for anyone claiming kindred to come forward, when, in less than twenty-four hours, he was visited by no less than six aunts, fourteen uncles, forty-four nephews, ninetythree nieces, and one hundred and fortyeight cousins

The civil war in China is attended with horrible atrocities. During the siege of Nanking, after all the food having been devoured, cannibalism broke out in the beleagued city, and human flesh was sold at four een pence per pound.

THE SIX STAGES.-Man is at ten, a child; at twenty, wild; at thirty, tame, if ever; at forty, wise; at fifty, rich; at sixty, MEERSCHAUM.

The value of the meerschaum pipes and cigar tubes imported into the United States in 1858, it is stated, amounted to $200,000 A great sum to be wasted on a mere alam. This is really getting to be a serious husiness. It is bad enough to waste time and moneysay nothing of breath-in the consumption of the evil weed, but when to this is added the mania for coloring expensive pipes, thus increasing the habit of smoking, the folly of it all is really too preposterous. We were amused the other day, at hearing a young but ambitious smoker, gravely as serting that meerschaum was made of the foam of the sea! This impression has probably arisen from the German word used to designate the material-meers hours meaning sea foam-a poetical figure of speech, alluding to its lightness and whitish appearance. It is properly magnesite, a mineral of soft carthly texture somewhat resembling chalk, found in Spain and other countries at the head of the Mediterranean. To produce the yellow and brown colors so much admired in the pipes, and which are brought out only after long smoking, the blocks from which the pipes are made, are kept for some time in a mixture of wax and fatty matters. A portion of these is absorbed, and being subsequently acted upon by the heat and the tobacco fumes, assumes various shades of color. Thus the smoker in coloring his pipe, is employed in the dignified business of mingling tobacco smoke with a mixture of wax and grease! Here we are reminded of a little incident which recently took place within our knowledge, and which amusingly illustrates the folly of meerschaum coloring. A gentleman had an expensive meerschaum, which he doted upon, but which notwithstanding all his smoking he could not color as fast as he desired. In fact, after long puffing, it only showed one little spot of brown. his friends told him they did not believe it would ever color, and the indefatigable smoker grew quite despondent. One evening his wife, who naturally sympathized with him in his trouble, took up the pipe during his absence, and while examining it brought it over the flame of a lamp. Immediately a strong color was brought out by the heat, much to the surprise of the lady. Laying the pipe away, however, she said nothing about the matter. On the following morning when the gentleman made his usual inspection of his beloved pipe, his delight and amazement knew no bounds. His meerschaum had colored splendidly, and all owing to his indefatigable puffing! He displayed it in triumph to his friends, and became a more firm believer than ever in the virtues of tobacco smoke. Meantime his good lady said nothing, but she has imparted the secret to her female friends that they may be able to assist their husbands in their arduous endeavors to color their meerschaums. She is a very benevolent lady, and wants to do all the good she can in the world,-Portland Trans-

A HYACINTH BLOOMING UNDER WATER.

Here is a pretty experiment for our lady friends who are fond of flowers. We copy from a little work called "The Parlor Gardener," published by J. E. Tilton & Co .:-Having made your choice among the brightest shades of blue, red and yellow, you must give your greatest care to a charming experiment which will be the source of a very agreeable amusement for you all the winter. You can procure, at a small expense, two vases of plain, clear, uncolored glass; both of the same form, except that one has no bottom, and is a little smaller than the other. They are to be used as follows:-Put into the one open at both ends one of the finest of your hyacinth roots; suppose you take one of a fine red-a Sultan Soliman for instance; place this bulb in a position inverse to its natural position, that is, with the bottom up, and the top, from which the leaves and flowers are to come, downward, even with the orifice at the bottom of the VA.90. Then you must crumble a mixture of good garden earth and leaf mould over the bulb until the vase is three-quarters full. A second bulb with a flower in strong contrast to the first, say a blue, if the flower of the first is red, and vice versa, must be next placed in the vase, so that the top shall be even with the upper orifice. You have nothing more to do than to place the vase thus prepared upon the first vase, full of water. Two similar couples look very well, placed upon two ends of the mantel-piece of a room in which people habitually sit, and where, consequently, fire is constantly made while the cold season lasts. The earth in the upper vase should be moderately watered as soon as the bulbs are placed in it, and then kept constantly moist, avoiding excess by renewed watering whenever you perceive that the earth is getting dry.

At the end of two days, the crowns of the two bulbs will both send out straight, white roots; those of the reversed bulb turn down in curves, but do not fulfill their functions worse for that. Very soon the two bulbs placed in a contrary position to each other put forth leaves-the one into the air, the other into the water; then you will see appear in the midst of the transparent liquid the buds on the floral stalk, and finally the flowers, as beautiful, as well formed, of as rich a color, surrounded by leaves of as fine a green as the corresponding parts possess, of the other flower planted in the ordinary manner, and vegetating and developing in the air its natural element. It is true that time i necessary for all this to be accomplished; bulbs planted in October will flower fully in February or March; but is it not a pleasure to watch day by day the phases of development, above all that of the hyacinth which ends by blooming in the water, head downward?

A lover often brings suit in the court of a lady's heart without being abie to sue out an attachment.

pipes and

ted States

$200,000

ere show business.

money-sumption

is added

pes, thus

e folly of t hearing

avely as-le of the has probmeaning ch, allual of soft

g chalk, as at the duce the admired

out only

e time in

A por-

g subse-

the to

of color.

e, is emvax and incident

r know-

ates the

ntleman ich he ding all

t as he it only lieve it

atigable

ed with during rought

ately a e heat.

Laying

othing

mornual inht and owing ayed it a more of to-ly said

ble to endea-

all the

Trans-

TER.

r lady

copy

Gar

the the v, you

of a

11 the ll ex-

olored

at one

-Put

of the you .

n for n in-

h the ward.

f the re of

l. A trast

with re to upon aced

bere.

hile

pper kept

the

OWE

ther

the

the

f as aif

ed;

ure

ich

wn-

BY MRS. HOYT.

What are the children thinking of To-night by the farmer's fire? What are the children talking of By the beautiful, blazing fire? There are little bits of boys and girls, And girls and boys not so very little, And girls and boys not so very little,
Some half undressed in cap and gown,
Sitting, standing, and tumbling down,
Frizzle heads, amouth heads, and heads of curis,
And some in boots who can whistle and whittle All together there in a heap, Big enough all to be saleep, Little tall children, little short children, Rosy children, plump as a berry,

Wide awake children, ever so merry, What is the cause of the clatter they keep To night, by the farmer's fire, By the beautiful, blazing fire?

I know what the children are thinking of By the fireside's ruddy glow, And I know what the children are talking of As well as I want to know: For I've been a little bit of a girl At night, by a farm-house fire, With elsters and brothers, oh, ever so many,

As wide awake and as noisy as any-Have helped, myself, to keep up the clatter By the beautiful, blazing fire, When counting the days to that golden date For the coming of Christmas we scarce could

Oh, that Christmas day! that blessed day: How could we wait? Yet we did wait, And so must you, my little friend; But come it will, you may depend, And the fair, white snow of the world below

Why, children, it will be a Christmas snow ! Such icicles hanging from all the caves, Such frost-work trellised on all the leaves, Such drifts, such piles, so dazzling white, How could God make it in just one night!

Oh, I know as well as if I were there How you will laugh and how you will shout, When you wake in the morning and first look And how you will laugh, and how you will shout

When you go down stairs and first find out How the gifts you have dreamed of have come to your share :

slates,

Your caps, mittens, knives, whistles, trumpet's, and skates. Just the happiest girls and the happiest boys

As you think, and I think, that ever were born

To live by the light of a farmer's fire; By the great, red blaze of the farm-house fire, By the beautiful fire of a Christmas morn.

- Wisconsin Farmer.

THE MYSTERY OF FERNWOOD:

THE EVIL OF CONCEALMENT.

PART I. "No, Isabel, I do not consider that Lady Adela seconded her son's invitation at all warmly." This was the third time within the last hour that my aunt had made the above remark. We were seated opposite to each other in a first-class carriage of the York ex-press, and the flat fields of ripening wheat vere flitting by us like yellow shadows under the afternoon sunshine. We were going on a visit to Fernwood, a country mansion twenty miles from York, in order that I might become acquainted with the family of Mr. Lewis Wendale, to whose only son Laurence I was engaged to be married.

Laurence Wendale and I had only been acquainted during the brief May and June of my first London season, which I-the orphan heiress of a wealthy Calcutta merchant-had passed under the roof of my aunt, Mrs. Maddison Trevor, the dashing widow of a major in the Life Guards, and the only sister of my dead father. Mrs. Trevor had made many objections to this brief six weeks' engagement between Laurence and I; but the impetuous the dull croaking of an army of frogs. young Yorkshireman had overruled every and Fernwood at his father's death; forty thousand pounds from a maiden aunt the day he came of age, -for he was not yet one and twenty, my impetuous young lover. As for his family, let Mrs. Trever look into Burke's "County Families" for the Wendales of Fernwood. His mother was Lady Adela, young est daughter of Lord Kingwood, of Castle Kingwood, county Kildare. What objection could my aunt have, then? His family did not know me, and might not approve of the match, urged my aunt. Laurence laughed aloud; a long ringing peal of that merry, musical laughter I loved so well to hear.

"Not approve!" he cried,-" not love my little Bella! That is too good a joke!" On which immediately followed an invitation to Fernwood, seconded by a note from Lady

It was to this very note that my aunt was never tired of taking objection. It was cold, was stiff, constrained; it had been only written to please Laurence. How little I thought of the letter! and yet it was the first glected." faint and shadowy indication of that terrible rock ahead upon which my life was to be wrecked; the first feeble link in the chain of long train of thought of his own, and then the one great mystery in which the fate of so many was involved.

The letter was cold, certainly. Lady Adela started by declaring she should be most happy to see us; she was all anxiety to be introduced to her charming daughter-in-law. And then my lady ran off to tell us how dull Fernwood was, and how she feared we should regret our long journey into the heart of Yorkshire to a lonely country-house, where we should find no one but a captious invalid, a couple of nervous women, and a young man devoted to farming and field-sports. But I was not afraid of being dull where my light-hearted Laurence was; and I overruled all my aunt's objections, ordered half a dozen new dresses, and carried Mrs. Maddi- volatile and spirits of lavender. My sister, explore the country with us. I have heard the duty of attendance upon this poor young

TO-NIGHT BY THE FARMER'S FIRE. | son Trevor off to the Great Northern Station before she had time to remonstrate.

Laurence had gone on before to see that all was prepared for us; and had promised to meet us at York, and drive us over to Fernwood in his mail-phaeton. He was standing on the platform as the train entered the station, with the sunshine glittering about his chestnut curls, and his clear blue eyes radiant with life and happiness.

Laurence Wendale was very handsome; but perhaps his greatest charm consisted in that wonderful vitality, that untiring energy and indomitable spirit, which made him so different to all other young men whom I had met. So great was this vitality, that, by some magnetic influence, it seemed to communi-cate itself to others. I was never tired when Laurence was with me. I could waltz longer with him for my partner; ride longer in the Row with him for my cavalier; sit out an opera, or examine an exhibition of pictures, with less fatigue when he was near. His presence pervaded a whole house; his joyous augh rang through every room. It seemed as if where he was sorrow could not come.

I felt this more than ever as we drew nearer Fernwood. The country was bleak and bare; wide wastes of moorland stretched away on either side of the by-road down which we drove. The afternoon sunshine had faded out, leaving a cold, gray sky, with low masses of leaden clouds brooding close over the landscape, and shutting in the dim horizon. But no influence of scenery or at mosphere could affect Laurence Wendale. His spirits were even higher than usual this afternoon.

"They have fitted up the oak-rooms for you, ladies," he said. "Such solemn and stately chambers, with high canopied beds crowned with funeral plumes; black oak paneling; portraits of dead-and-gone Wendales; Mistress Aurora, with pannier-hoops and a shepherdess's crook; Mistress Lydia, with ringlets a la Serigne and a pearl necklace; Mortimer Wendale, in a Ramilies wig; Theodore, with love locks, velvet doublet, and Spanish-leather boots. Such a collection of them? You may expect to see them all descend from their frames in the witching As you empty your stockings of goodies and time of night to warm their iey fingers at your sea-coal fires. Your expected arrival And take down your dolls, books, pictures and has made quite a sensation in our dull, old abode. My mother has looked up from the last new novel she had from Mudie half a dozen times this day, I verily believe, to ask if all due preparations were being made; while my dear, active, patient, indefatigable sister Lucy has been running about superintending the arrangements ever since breakfast."

"Your sister Lucy," I said, catching at his last words; "I shall so love her, Laurence." "I hope you will, darling," he answered, almost gravely, "for she has been the best and dearest sister to me. And yet I'm half afraid; Lucy is ten years older than yougrave, reserved, sometimes almost melan choly; but if ever there was a banished angel treading this earth in human form, my sister Lucy surely is that guardian spirit."

"Is she like you, Laurence ?" "Like me? Oh, no, not in the least. She is only my half-sister, you know. She resembles her mother, who died young."

We were at the gates of Fernwood when he said this-high wooden gates, with stone pillars moss-grown and dilapidated; a tumble-down looking lodge, kept by a slatternly woman, whose children were at play in a square patch of ground planted with cabbages and currant-bushes, fenced in with a rotten paling, and ambitiously called a gar den. From this lodge-entrance a long avenue stretched away for about half a mile, at the end of which a great red-brick mansion, built in the Tudor style, frowned at us rather as if in deflance than in welcome. The park was entirely uncultivated; the trunks of the trees were choked with the tangled underwood; the fern grew deep in the long vistas, broken here and there by solitary pools of black water, on whose quiet borders we heard the flap of the heron's wing, and Lady Adela was right. Fernwood was a What objection could there be? he dull place. I could scarcely repress a shudwhile, as for my poor aunt, her teeth chattered audibly. Accustomed to spend three parts of the year in Onslow Square, and the autumn months at Brighton or Ryde, this ing this dear girl to me. Believe me, we dreary Yorkshire mansion was a terrible trial to her rather over-sensitive nerves.

Laurence seemed to divine the reason of our silence.

"The place is frightfully neglected, Mrs Trevor," he said apologetically, "but I do not mean this sort of thing to last, I assure you. Before ever I bring my delicate little Bella to Fernwood, I will have landscape gardeners and upholsterers down by the score, and try to convert this dreary wilderness into a terrestrial paradise. I cannot tell you why the place has been suffered to fall into decay; certainly not for want of money, still less for want of opportunity, for my father is an idle man, to whom one would imagine restoring and rebuilding would afford a delightful hobby. No, there is no reason why the place should have been so be

He said this more to himself than to us, as if the words were spoken in answer to some growing silent, he seemed to relapse into this old reverie. I watched his face earnestly, for I had seldom seen him look so thought ful. Presently he said, with more his old manner,

"As you are close upon the threshold of Fernwood now, ladies, I ought perhaps to tell you that you will find ours a most lowspirited family. With everything in life to take us happy, we seem for ever under a cloud. Ever since I can remember my poor father, he has been dropping slowly into de cay, almost in the same way as this neglected place, till now he is a confirmed invalid, without any positive illness. My mother reads novels all day, and half lives upon sal-

ANCIENT SPANISH MARTELLO TOWER UPON TYBEE ISLAND, MOUTH OF THE SAVANNAH RIVER, GA. FROM A SKETCH TAKEN ON THE SPOT.

dent:

had ushered us into the presence of Laty

We found Lady Adela, as her son's de scription had given us reason to expect, as sorbed in a novel. She threw down her book as we entered, and advanced to meet us with considerable cordiality; rather, in deed, as if she really were grateful to us far

"It is so good of you to come," she sail, folding me in her slender arms with an a most motherly embrace, "and so kind a you, too, my dear Mrs. Trever, to abunder all your town pleasures for the sake of bring-will do all in our power to make you comfortable, if you can put up with very limited society; for we have received no company

whatever since my son's childhood, and I do not think my visiting-list could muster half a Lady Adela was an elegant-looking woman in the very prime of life; but her handsome

Laurence's half-sister was by no mean handsome; pale and sallow, with dark hair some hidden sorrow had quenched out the youth; some sorrow that had neither been forgotten nor decreased by time, but that become a part of her very self, -some disappointed attachment, I thought, some cruel blow that had shattered a girl's first dream and left a broken-hearted woman to mount the fatal delusion. In my utter ignorance of life. I thought these were the only grief

Isabel," Lucy Wendale said, gently, as she drew me into a seat by her side, while Laurence bent fondly over as both. I do no believe, dear as we were to each other, that my Laurence ever loved me as he loved this pale-faced half-sister. "You will try and be happy, will you not, dear Isabel ? Laurence has been breaking-in the prettiest chestnut

" You will try and be happy at Fernweed, which ever left a woman's life des late,

drew nearer to each other,

Adela and Miss Lucy Wendale.

breaking in upon her solitary life. "

When the National troops landed on Tybee | least 10 feet thick, pierced for musketry, and | and dangerous, we gain a view of the inter-Island, at the mouth of the Savannah river, with portholes for five cannon, and evidently nat arrangements of this curious work. In they found the fortifications erected there by intended to resist a long siege, it showed that the centre is a well, constructed of heavy the rebels abandoned. In the centre of the this was the scene of war and bloodshed timber, which extends from a distance below works was a monument of "the olden time," generations ago. How many flags had waved the ground to the summit of the tower. At a martello tower, built by the early Spanlards. Over its gray battlements it were hard to tell—the bottom of this well was once a fine spring It is thus described by the Herald correspon- First the Spanish, then the French or Eng. of water, but it had long since been clogged lish; afterwards the Colonial ensign; then up with falling timber and masses of con-"Within the battery rose the gray walls of the Stars and Stripes, followed for a brief crete. From the well timbers are laid to the a martello tower, showing but few evi-time by a rebel flag of stars and bars, and dences of decay without, but within the platforms and floors, and the neavy timbers, were shing of beauty high above it. When we wasted by rot and rapidly crumbling to dust.

It was a strange old tower, and, a curious monument of ancient engineering skill. It he lower door, and barricading it. Entrance the same than the lower door, and barricading it. Entrance the same than the lower door, and barricading it. Entrance the same than th is at least 50 feet in diameter and as many to the tower is gained by a ladder of primitive style, which leads to a door 10 feet from crete of oyster shells and lime, with walls at the ground. Stepping upon a floor, rotten are seen near the parapet."

the only active person in the house, is al-1 what a daring horsewoman you are. The man, Laurence; and I will never leave Fern ways thoughtful, and very often melancholy. pianos have been put in tune for you, and wood while he lives."

Mind, I merely tell you this to prepare you the hilliard-table re-covered that you may Young man! Mr. Thomas was a young for anything you may see; not to depress have exercise on rainy days; and if we can man, then. you, for you may depend upon my exertions towards reforming this dreary household, which has sunk into habitual despondency. I shall be very happy here with you, dear us. Mrs. Trever's room was separated from from sheer easy fortune and want of vexi-The phaeton drew up before a broad flight of stone steps as Laurence count speaking, and in five minutes more he had sa d, gravely.

tiently, "everybody know this full place is killing you by inches, and yet nothing on lation.

Lucy left us as soon as she had installed foreign travel, he had some difficulty in foreign travel, he ha what the world is made of outside these found everything I required. dreary gates, you obstinately persist in staying at home; and the only reason you can yours, Mr. Thomas. felt the poor wasted little fingers tremble as her brother spoke. My curiosity was strongly

"Mr Thomas" Lexclaimed, half-involuntarily.

"Ah, to be sure, Belia, I forgot to tell yo face was thin and careworn, and premature wrinkles gathered about her melancholy blue of that member of our household, but so I eyes and thoughtful mouth. While she was talking to my aunt, Lucy Wendale and I have never seen him, I may be lorgiven the omission. This Mr. Thomas is a poor rela tive of my father's a hopeless invalid, bed ridden, I believe, - is he not, Lucy & -whu re and rather dull gray eyes, she looked as if quires a strong man and an experience nurse to look after him, and who occupie the entire upper story of one wing of the light of her life long ago, in her earliest house. Poor Mr. Thomas, invalid as he is must certainly be a most fascinating person My mother goes to see him every day, but as had rather grown with her growth, and stealthily as if she were paying a secret visit. strengthened with her strength, until it had to some condemned criminal. I have often met my father coming away from his rooms pale and melancholy, and, as for my sister Lucy, she is so attached to this sick depen dent of ours, that, as I have just said, nothing will induce her to leave the house, for fear his nurse or his valet should fail in their care of

I still held Lucy's hand, but it was per feetly steady now. Could this poor relative this invalid dependent, have any part in the s rrowful mystery that had avershadowed her life? And yet, no; I thought that could scarcely be, for she looked up with such perfect self-possession as she unswered her bro ther

"My whole life has gradually fallen into mare in all Yorkshire, I think, that you may Lucy," I said; "but you tell me so much of mine by a corridor, out of which opened two die dullness of Fernwood, while, I dare say, dressing rooms and a pretty little boudoir, all you yourself have a hundred associations that make the old place very dear to you."

She looked down as I spoke, and a very doors, one leading to the corridor communiusisted my aunt and myself to alight, and fain: flush broke through the sallow paleness cating with my aunt's apartments, the other of her complexion.

"I am not very fond of Fernwood," she length of the house. Looking out into this a.d., gravely.

It was at Fernwood, then, that the great shut in by a baise door. I looked with some sorrow of her life came upon her, I thought curiosity at this heavy balze door. It was "No, Lucy," said Laurence, almost impa most likely the barrier which closed the outer world upon Laurence Wendale's invalid re> magoes to Harrowgate, when I run up to was dressing for dinner, the housekeeper, a town to rub off my provincial rust, and see stout, elderly woman, came to ask me if I

"As you haven't brought your own ser vant with you, min," she said, "Miss Lucy urge for doing so is, that you must remain here told me to place her maid. Sarah entirely at to take care of that unfortunate invalid of your service. Miss gives very little work to a maid herself, so Sarah has plenty of leisure I was holding Lucy's hand in mine, and I time set her hands, and you'll find her a very respectable soning woman

I told her that I could do all I wanted for myself; but before she left me I could not resist asking her one question about the mys

Arc Mr. Thomas's resum at the end of the house ?" I neked.

The woman looked at me with an almost scared expression, and was silent for a m

"Has Mr. Laurence been saving anothing to you about Mr. Themms " also said a father anxiously, as I thought. "Mr. Laurence and his sister Most Ling were both talking of him just now " "Oh, indeed, miss," answered the woman with an air of relief, "the poor gentleman's rooms are at the other end of the callery, "Has he lived here long?" I asked.

Nigh upon twenty years, miss-above twenty years. I'm thinking

"I suppose he is distantly related to the

And quite dependent on Mr. Wendale?"

Yes, miss.

It is very good of your master to have pported I im for so many years, and to keep

My master is a very good man, miss." The woman seemed determined to give me w little information as possible; but I could not resist one more question.

"How is it that in all these years Mr. Laurence has never seen this invalid relation I asked.

It seemed that this question, of all others, was the most embarrassing to the house keeper. She turned first red and then pale, and said, in a very confused manner,

"The poor gentleman never leaves his room, mise; and Mr. Laurence has such high apirits, bless his dear hearf, and has such a noisy, rackety way with him, that he's no fit company for an invalid."

company for an invalid."

It was evidently useless trying for further information, so I abandoned the attempt, and bidding the housekeeper good afternoon, began to dress my hair before the massive oak-framed looking-glass.

"The truth of the matter is," I said to my-self "thuth of the matter is," I said to my-self.

self, "that after all there is nothing more to be said about it. I have tried to create a mystery out of the simplest possible family arrangement. Mr. Wendale has a bed-ridden relative, too poor and too helpless to support himself. What more natural than that he should give him house-room in this dreary old mansion, where there seems space enough to lodge a regiment?"

I found the family assembled in the draw-ing room. Mr. Wendale was the wreck of a very handsome man. He must in early life have resembled Laurence; but, as my lover had said, it seemed indeed as if he and the house and grounds of Fernwood had fallen into decay together. But notwithstanding his weak state of health, he gave us a warm welcome, and did the honors of his hospitable dinner-table with the easy grace of a finished

After dinner, my aunt and Lady Adels sat at one of the windows talking; while Laurence, Lucy, and I gathered together upon a long stone terrace outside the drawing-room, watching the last low crimson streak of the August sunset fade out behind the black trunks of the trees, and melt away into faint red splashes upon the water-pools among the brushwood. We were very happy together; Laurence and I talking of a hundred different subjects, teiling Lucy our London adventures, describing our fashionable friends, our drives and rides, fetes, bulls, and dinners; she, with a grave smile upon her lips, listening to us with almost maternal patience.

"I must take you over the old house tomorrow, Isabel," Laurence said, in the course of the evening. "I suppose Lucy did not tell you that she had put you into the haunt-

" No, indeed "

" You must not listen to this silly boy, my dear Isabel," said Miss Wendale. "Of course, like all other old houses, Fernwood can beast its ghost-story; but since no one in my father's lifetime has ever seen the phantom, you may imagine that it is not a very formidable one."

"But you own there is a ghost ?" I exclaim ed engerly. "Pray tell me the story."

"I'll tell you, Bella," answered Laurence, and then you'll know what sort of visitor to expect when the bells of Fernwood church, hidden away behind the elms yonder, tremble on the stroke of midnight. A certain Sir Humphrey Wendaie, who lived in the time of Henry the Eighth, was wronged by his wife, a very beautiful woman. Had he acted according to the ordinary fashion of the time. he would have murdered the lady and his rival; but our ancester was of a more crisinal turn of mind, and he hit upon an original plan of vengeance. He turned every servant out of Fernwood House; and one morning, when the unhappy lady was sleeping, be locked every door of the mansion, secured every outlet and inlet, and rode away merrily in the summer sunshine, leaving his wife to die the slow and hideous death of starva tion. Fernwood is lonely enough even how, Heaven knows! but was lonelier in these distant days. A passing traveller may new and then have glanced upward at the smokeless he rode under the park palings; but none ever dreamed that the deserted mansion had one luckless tenant. Fifteen months after wards, when hir Homebrey rode home from foreign travel, he had some difficulty in for-

What a hearth colory " I exclaimed with

"It is only a learned, days beated," and Larry; Tike all tradition, evaggerated and distorted the due proportions of poetit horror. Pray, to not eaffer your mind to dwell upon such .

Indeed I hope it is not true," I answered. "How fond people we of linking mysters and morrors such as this with the history of an old family. And yet we never fall across any out h family mystery in our own days?"

I slept soundly to stuight at Fernwood, or disturbed by the attenuated shadow of Sybil Wendale, Sir Hamphrey's unhappy wife The bright somelone was reflected in the calpanels of my room, and the larks were sing-ing high up in a cloudless blue sky, when I awake. I found my aunt quite reconciled to

"Lady Adela is a very agreeable woman she said "quiet, perhaps, to a fault, but with that high tunn of manner which is always charming. Long Web lale seems a dear good girl, though evidently a confirmed bid maid You will find her of inestimable use when you are married, that is to say, if you ever have to manage this great rambling place, which will of course tall to your lot in the event of poor Mr. Wondale's death."

As for myself, I was as happy at Fernwood as the August days were long. Lncy Wendale rode remarkatly well. It was the only amusement for which she cared; and she and her horses were on terms of the most devoted attachment. Laurence, his sister, and I were therefore constantly out together, riding amonest the hills about Fernwood, and exploring the country for twenty miles round.

Indoors, Lucy left us very much to ourselves. She was the ruling spirit of the house, and but for her every thing must have fallen utterly to decay. Lady Adela read novels, or made a feeble attempt at amusing my aunt pools of stagmant water hiding among the with her conversation. Mr. Wendale kept tangled brushwood his room during the fore part of the day; while Laurence and I played, sang, eketched, and rattled the billiard-balls over the green cloth whenever bad weather drove us to in-noticed one peculiar circumstance connected. valid, Mr. Tifbmas. These ruoms were at the extreme left angle of the building, and were lighted by a range of six windows. I these windows was of ground glass. I asked Adela's novels seemed so stupid as when I Laurence the reason of this.

"Why, I believe the glare of light was too much for Mr. Thomas," he answered; "so my father, who is the kindest creature in Christendom, had the windows made opaque, as you see them now."

Has the alteration been long made ?"

It was made when I was about six years old; I have rather a vague recollection of the event, and I should not perhaps remember it but for one circumstance. I was riding about down here one morning on my Shetland pony, when my attention was attracted by a child who was looking through one of those windows. I was not near enough to see hi face, but I fancy he must have been about my own age. He beckened to me, and I was riding across the grass to respond to his invitation, when my sister Lucy appeared at the window and anatched the child away. I suppose he was some one belonging to the female attendant upon Mr. Thomas, and had strayed unnoticed into the invalid's rooms. I never saw him again; and the next day a glazier came over from York, and made the alteration in the windows."

" But Mr. Thomas must have air; I sug pose the windows are sometimes opened," I "Never: they are each ventilated by single-pane, which, if you observe, is open

"I cannot help pitying this poor man," ! eaid, after a pause, "shut out almost from the light of heaven by his infirmities, deprived of all society.

"Not entirely so," answered Laurence, "No one knows how many stolen hours my sister Lucy devotes to her poor invalid."

Perhaps be is a very studious man, and finds his consolation in literary or scientific pursuits," I said. "Does he read very much !

I think not. I never heard of his having any books got for him.

" But one thing has puzzled me, Laurence," I continued. "Lucy spoke of him the other day as a young man, and yet Mrs. Porson. your housekeeper, told me he had lived at Pernwood for upwards of twenty years."

"As for that," answered Laurence, care lessly, "Lucy no doubt remembers him as a young man upon his first arrival here, and continues to call him so from mere force of babit. But, pray, my little inquisi tive Bella, do not rack your brains about this poor relation of ours. To tell the truth, I have ecome so used to his unseen presence in the house, that I have ceased to think of him at all. I meet a grim woman, dressed in black merino, coming out of the green-balze door, and I know that she is Mr. Thomas's nurse or I see a solemn-faced man, and I am equally assured that he is Mr Thomas's servant, James Beck, who has grown gray in his office; I encounter the doctor riding away from Fernwood on his brown cob, and I feel convinced that he has just looked in to see how Mr. Thomas is going on; if I miss my sister for an hour in the twilight, I know that she is in the west wing talking to Mr Thomas; but as nobody ever calls upon me to do anything for the poor man, I think no more of the matter. I felt these words almost a reproof to what might have appeared idle, or even impertinent, curiosity on my part. And yet the careless indifference of Laurence's manner seemed to jar upon my senses. Could it be that this glad and high hearted being, whom I so tenderly loved, was selfish-heedless of the sufferings of others? No, it was surely not this that prompted his thoughtless words. It is a positive impossibility for one whose whole nature is life and motion, animation and vigor, to comprehend for one brief moment the terrors of the invalid's darkened rooms and solitary days.

I had been nearly a month at Fernwood, when, for the first time during our visit, Laurence left us. One of his old school fellows, a lieutenant in the army, was quartered with his regiment at York, and Laurence had promissed to dine at the mess. Though I had been most carnest in requesting him to accept this invitation, I could not help feeling dull and dispirited as I watched him drive away down the avenue, and felt that for the first time we were to spend the long autumn even ing without him. Do what I would, the time hung heavily on my hands. The September sugget was beautiful, and Lucy and I walked up and down the terrace after dinner, while Mr. Wendale slept in his easy chair, and my aunt and Lady Adeia exchanged drowsy monosyllabic sentences on a bouch near the fire, which was always lighted in the evening.

It was in vain that I tried to listen to Lucy's conversation. My thoughts wandered in spite of myself,—sometimes to Laurence in the brilliantly-lighted mess-room, collivening a cluster of blaise officers with his hoisterous galety; sometimes, as if in contrast to this to the dark west rooms in which the invalid counted the long hours; sometimes to that dim future in whose shadowy years death was to claim our weary bost, and Laurence and I were to be master and mistress at Fern-I had often tried to picture the place as it would be when it fell into Laurence's bands, and architects and landscapegardeners came to work their wondrous gardeners came to work their wondrous transformations; but, do what I would, I could never imagine it otherwise than as it was,—with straggling ivy hanging foriornly shout the moss stained walls, and colliers are recommended to the photon-was,—with straggling ivy hanging foriornly are recommended to the service calling to the service. walls, and solitary vants.

Laurence and I were to be married in the following spring. He would come of age in Pebruary, and I should be twenty in March,-scarcely a year between our ages and both a great deal too young to marry, It was one day that I was sketching the my aunt said. After ton Luny and I sang eastellated facade of the old mansion, that I and played. Dreary music it seemed to me that night. I thought my voice and the with the suite of rooms occupied by the in- piano were both out of tune, and I left Lucy very rudely in the middle of our favor-I took up twenty books from the ite duct. crowded drawing room table, only to throw was surprised by observing that every one of them wearily down again. Never had Lady looked into them that night; never had my aunt's conversation sounded so tiresome. I looked from my watch to the old-fashioned time-piece upon the chimney half-a-dozen times, to find at last that it was scarcely ten o'clock. Laurence had promised to be home by cleven, and had begged Lucy and I to sit up for him.

Eleven struck at last; but Laurence had not kept his promise. My sunt and Lady Adela rose to light their candles. Mr. Wendale always retired a little after nine, I pleaded for half an-hour longer, and Lucy was too kind not to comply readily.

"Isabel is right," she said; "Laurence is a oilt boy, you know, mamma, and will feel himself very much ill-used if he finds no one up to hear his description of the moss

"Only half-an-hour, then, mind, young ladies," said my aunt. "I cannot allow you to spoil your complexions on account of dissipated people, who drive twenty miles to a military dinner. One half-hour; not a moment more, or I shall come down again to scold you both."

We promised obedience, and my aunt left s. Lucy and I seated ourselves on each side of the low fire, which had burned dull and hollow. I was much too dispirited to talk, and I sat listening to the ticking of the clock, and the occasional falling of a cinder in the bright steel fender. Then that thought came to me which comes to all watchers. What if anything had happened to Laurence I went to one of the windows, and pulled back the heavy wooden shutters. It was a lovely night; clear, though not moonlight, and a myriad stars gleamed in the cloudless sky. I stood at the window for some time listening for the wheels, and watching for the lights of the phaton

I, too, was a spoilt child; life had for me been bright and amooth, and the least thought of grief or danger to those I loved filled me with a wild panic. I turned suddenly round to Lucy, and cried out-

"Lucy! Lucy! I am getting frightened. Suppose anything should have happened to Laurence. Those horses are wild and upma nageable sometimes. If he had taken a few glasses of wine, -if he trusted the groom to

She came over to me, and took me in her arms, as if I had been, indeed, a little child.

"My darling," she said, "my darling Isa bel, you must not distress yourself by such fancies as these. He is only bull an-hour later than he said, and as for danger, dearest, he is beneath the shelter of Providence, without whose safeguard those we love are never secure even for a moment.

Her quiet manner calmed my agitation. I left the window, and returned shivering to the expiring fire.

Bella, dear," she said, presently; " we must keep our gromise, and as for Laurence, you will hear the phation drive in before you go o sleep, I dare say.

I shall not go to sleep until I do hear it, I answered, as I hade her good night,

I could not help listening for the welcome ound of the carriage wheels as I crossed the half and went up stairs. I stopped in the corridor to look into my aunt's room; but she was fast asleep, and I closed the door as softly as I had opened it. It was as I left this room that, glancing down the corridor, I was surprised to see that there was a light in my own bed-chamber. I was prepared to find a fire there, but the light shining through the halfopen door was something brighter than the red glow of a fire. I had joined Laurence in laughing at the ghost-story, but my first thought on seeing this light was of the shadou of the wretched Lady Sybil. What if I found her crouching over my hearth?

I had half a mind to go back to my aunt's room, awake her, and tell her my fears; but one moment's reflection made me ashamed of my cowardice. I went on, and pushed open the door of my room. There was no pale phantom shivering over the open hearth. There was an old fashioned silver candlestick upon the table, and Laurence, my lover, was seated by the blazing fire; not dressed in the evening costume he had worn for the dinnerparty, but wrapped in a loose gray woollen ressing gows, and wearing a black-velvet smoking-cap upon his chestaut bair.

Without stopping to think of the strangeness of his appearance in my room; without wondering at the fact of his having entered the house unknown to either Lucy or myself; without one thought but joy and relief o mind in seeing him once more,-I ran for ward to him, crying out, "Laurence, Lau rence, I am so glad you have come back

He-Laurence, my lover, as I thought, the man, the horrible shadow, the dreadful be ing-rose from his chair, and saatching up some papers that lay loosely on the table by his side, crumpled them into a ball with one fierce gesture of his strong hand, and flung them at my feet; then, with a harsh disso nant laugh that seemed a mocking echo of the joyous music I loved so well, he stalked out of the door opening on the gallery. I tried to scream, but my dry lips and throat could form no sound. The oak paneling of the room spun round, the walls and ceiling contracted, as if they had been crushing in (CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

NEW PREMIUM FOR 1862.

A LITERARY AND NEWS PAPER!

STORIES, SKETCHES, WAR NEWS, MARKETS, &c.

Those wishing to economize in hear war firmes, cannot, we think, do better than to subscribe for that "oldest and best of the weeklies," THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, of Philadelphia. For the small price of two dellars a year, (d,wn to one dellar, in club.) a paper is sent, containing a summery of all the

IMPORTANT NEWS OF THE WEEK,

at the same time that ample space is devoted to STORIES, SKETCHES, ESSAYS, AGRICULTURAL ARTICLES, CHOICE RECEIPTS, AN ACCOUNT OF THE MARKETS, POETRY, HUMOROUS ARTICLES, EDITORIALS, &c. We design commencing the new year with a story from the talented pen which has heretofore forded our readers so much pleasure. The new story will be called

DAFFODIL'S DELIGHT;

A LIFE'S SECRET.

By MRS. WOOD, Author of "THE MYSTERY," "DANESBURY HOUSE," "THE EARL'S DAUGHTERA," "THE RED COURT FARM," &c.

We also appounds an admirable PRIMIUM for these war times.

A LARGE COLORED MAP OF THE SLAVIHOLDING STATES.

THIS MAP IS FOUR PEET LONG BY THREE FEET BROADS

It comprises all the Slaveholding States: the States are in different colors: the Counties, Towns, Villages, Harbors, Rivers and Forts are giver: the Railroads, their stations and distances, are size laid down: the whole Map being compiled from the latest government and other reliable sources. The importance of this Map, in enabling thereader of the War News to understand all land or sea movements in the Southern States, need not be enlarged upon. Without a Map, and a good one, the War News must be more or less unlacefulgible to the reader. This Map is, as we have said, four feet in length by thrus feet in breadin! EVERY FERSON SHOULD HAVE ONE OF THESE MAPS—AND ONE OF THEM WILL BE GIVEN TO EVERY TWO-DOLLAR SUBSCRIBER TO THE POST, ON THE RECEIPT OF HIS SUBSCRIPTION FOR THE COMING TEAR. TO TWO-DOLLAR SUBSCRIBERS IN THE COUNTRY, THEY WILL BE SENT BY MAIL, UPON RECEIPT OF THEM SUBSCRIPTIONS, (the postage being prepaid by us!)

ONE OF THESE LARGE COLORED TAPS WILL ALSO BE SENT GRATIS TO EVERY PERSON WHO GETS UP A CLUB FOR THE POST, (the postage being prepaid by us!)

TERMS: CASH IN ADVANCE.

1 copy, one year,	G			*		$3.00
I copy two years,	6		*		4	3.00
I copy, four years,				*		5.00
2 copies, one year,	14			4		3.00
4 copies, one year,						5.00
S copies, one year,						10.00
0 copies, one year,		14				13.00
O copies, one year,	+					20.00

The getter up of a club of two copies, and of a club of four copies, will receive one of the ge Colored Maps grain (postage prepaid) by his trouble.

The getter-up of any of the larger clubs will receive an exten paper (as of old), and one py of the large Colored Map (postage prepaid) in addition.

Let Every two dollar subscriber gets a copy of the Map in addition to his paper.

Let Every dub subscriber who wishes a copy of this Map, can have it sent to him (postage prepaid) forwarding Fifty Cents in addition to the civil rate.

Sample copies of THE POST sent when requested, gratis.

Address

DEACON & PETERSON, NO. 319 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

TO EDITORS.—Editors who give its above one insertion, or condense the material por-ons of it for their cuitorial columns, shall be suitled to an exchange, by sending us a marked copy the paper containing the advertisement of notice.

DEATH OF PRINCE ALBERT.

The first intimation of the illness of the Prince Consort was that on Tucsday, December 3rd, when it was stated that he had seen suffering from a feverish cold.

The first bulletin in regard to his condition was issued on Wednesday, Drc. 11th. It stated that the Prince was suffering from a fever unattended by unfavorable symptoms. On the following day, a bulletin announced that the Prince had passed a quiet night, but his symptoms had undergone little change, and the little insued at 9 o'clock on Saturday night bulletin issued at 9 o'clock on Saturday night of the prince of Texans. Thence had passed a few or the favorable. At half past four o'clock was traitorously surrendered by Col. Lynder to an inferior force of Texans. Thence had passed a few or the favorable. At half past four o'clock was traitorously surrendered by Col. Lynder to an inferior force of Texans. Thence had bulletin was issued as a more critical a commentation of the surface of the surface rally, but more particularly upon the best means of defending Pennsylvania from a foreign enemy. The Governor some time since wrote to J. G. Totten, Chief of the Engisince wrote to 3. d. Totten, Chief of the Engineers' Department, at Washington, requesting early information respecting the present state of the defence of the river Delaware and harbor of Eric. The reply is most satisfactory, and in substance is as follows:—

Fort Delaware is now ready to receive its entire armament, amounting to one hundred and thirty deal respective.

entire armament, amounting to one hundred and thirty-five large guns, besides twenty flanking 24-pound howitzers. Fort Miffin is also ready for its entire armament, consisting of forty-seven large is now before Congress for a grant of money to commence a new fort opposite to Fort Defa-ware, and for the means of increasing the de-fensive capacity of Fort Mifflin, as well as completing the barracks accommodations of Fort Delaware.

respect to Lake Erie, Congress is asked to grant a large sum of money for the purpose of providing temporary defences at ich points on the northern frontier as may quire them. If war comes, Pennsylvania least will be armed and ready for the con

THE GOLD FILLDS -The diggings in British Columbia, according to a recent paper, are doing very well. "The Cariboo gold mines in British Columbia are yielding handsomely at present. One is reported to have taken out a hundred ounces per day!—a pretty large pile, if the truth has not been ex-miners are confident that Cariboo is to be the great gold field of Western America, eclipsing even California and the Rocky The shipments to San Francis from British Columbia this year are expected reach four and a half million of de

It is a somewhat singular coincidence that the battle of Buil Run was rought on the 20th of July, the battle of Ball's Buff on the 20th of October, and the battle of Drainesville on the 20th of December.

Kit Carson is now a colonel of a regiment of mounted rangers, south of the Rio Grande, making his headquarters at Albuquerque, Judge Arny has succeeded him as Indian agent, and is co-operating with him, using the Indians as scouts. As the Union forces ad-vance south, the rebels retreat.

THE SUCCESSES IN MISSOURI.—Within two weeks the United States army in Missouri has captured 2,500 rebels, 70 of them commissioned officers, 1,200 horses and mules 1,100 stand of arms, two tons of powder, 100 wagons, an immense amount of commissary stores, a large rebel cannon foundry, destroyed or captured most of the rebel craft on the Missouri river, including several ferry boats, swept clear of rebels the whole coun-try between the Missouri and Osage rivers, and forced Price to retreat in disorder totry between the Missouri and Osage rivers, and forced Price to retreat in disorder toward Arkansas. He has already reached Springfield and gone south. In these important operations we have not lost more 100 killed and wounded. Now if Gen. 100 kitied and wounded. Now if Gen. Pope could only assure us that Price will be kept retreated and retreating, we shall feel satis-fied.

The damage done to the North Missouri and Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroads have been much exaggerated. The repairs are raphitly being made. Ten bridge-burners have already been shot, and fifty others are in close confinement, to be summarily dealt with under Gen. Halleck's stringent orders. In a few days it is confidently expected that our moving columns will as effectually break up bridge-burning north of the Missouri as the rebellion has been crushed south of the river. No mercy will be shown to the scoun-drels. Gen. Haireck's emphatic orders with reference to all bridge-burners are to shoot down every one making the attempt.

A LARGE meeting of Irishmen was recently British government; a large [portion of the meeting voted "no"-and the proceedings were constantly interrupted.

The loss of horses by the Washington fire seems to have been exaggerated. It turns out that 100 were destroyed.

Donald McKay, the celebrated American ship-builder, has sent the following letter to the Boston Commercial Journal:

LONDON, Dec. 8, 1861. Ritior Boston Commercial Pulletin:

I suppose it will be interesting for you to learn how far the English Government has advanced in reconstructing its fleet.

The building of any of the common class men-of-war ships has been almost entirely abandoned for the moment, and all the energies of the Government are directed exclusively on the sudden creation of a fleet of iron-cased frigates and ships.

There are aftest, by this time, the follow-iron-cased ships:	than trane,	the ron

	Guns.	Horse
Warrior,	40	1,260
Black Prince,	40	1,250
Defence,	22	600
Resistance,	29	600
Hocker,	2303	800

Of these, only the Warrior and the Black Prince have had their trial trips, on which the first named vessel realized, with all her armament, stores and provisions on board, the high speed of 14½ knots, and so exceeded armament, stores and provisions on board, the high speed of 14½ knots, and so exceeded the highest expectations ever entertained by her designers, Mesers Isaac Watta and Jos. Large. On her subsequent trial at sea, in stormy weather, the ship behaved admirably, and had very easy motions. In grateful acknowledgment of the eminent service rendered to his country by the design of this most successful vessel, Mr. I. Watts has been decorated with a high Order by Her Majesty.

The Black Prince has even obtained a higher speed than the Warrior. The experiments at Shoeburyness, on the power of resistance of a section of the Warrior against shots (only finished a few days since), have plainly shown that the Warrior's sides are practically impenetrable to the heaviest shot; and this settles forever the question about the superiority of iron-cased ships over those of the old construction.

the old construction.

The two following iron cased ships are uilding:

Achilies, Valiant,	Guna. 36 33	Horres. 1,250 800

The Achilles will have the same principal dimensions as the Warrior and Black Prince, but her displacement will be about 790 tous larger, and she will be cased from stem to larger, and she will be cased from seen to stern.

Six other iron cased ships, of 60 guas each, are to be built, and three of them have been ordered already. One of them will be built by Laird, in Birkenhead; another by Mare, in Poplar; and the third by the Thames Iron Works. They are to be 400 feet long and 60 feet wide. Their engines will be of 1,250 horse power, and their speed is expected to be 12 to 13 knots. They will be eased either with 44 inch iron on a teak-wood backing, or by 64 inch iron shals without a wooden backing. Which of these systems is to be chosen, will be decided after the new series of experiments (conducted at Shoeburyness) on the riments (conducted at Shoeburyness) on the resistance of iron plates to shot, shall have been completed.

In addition to these 13 iron ships, the fol-

In addition to these 13 iron ships, the following 5 wooden ships are rapidly building in the navy-yards, expressly designed for being armor-plated: Royal Alfred, in Portsmouth; Royal Oak, in Chatham; Caledonia, in Woodewich; Ocean, in Devenport; Triumph in Pembroke. Their principal dimensions are:—Length, 273 feet; oreadth, 58 feet 6 inches; depth of hold, 19 feet 10 inches; draught of water, 25 feet 9 inches; height of battery, 7 feet; burden is tons, 4,045; horse-power, 2,000. Their armament will consist of 40 guns of the heaviest calibre, and they battery, 7 feet; burden is tons, 4,045; horse-power, 2,000. Their armament will consist of 40 guns of the heaviest calibre, and they will be iron-cased in all their lengths. This number of eighteen iron-cased men-of-war ships, of the largest class, is to be ready for san by the end of next year, and the capital which they represent is estimated at the enormous sum of eight million pounds sterling, or about thirty-nine millions of dollars.

The French Government will have, by the same time, affost, about twenty iron-cased ships; and all the principal, and even minor ships; and all the principal, and even minor Powers of Europe, are constructing a large number of these powerful ships.

In view of these startling facts, it becomes evident that our national fleet ought to be immediately and largely increased, so as to be prepared for any emergency. Such as our Navy is at the present moment, it ranks hardly with second-rate European Powers, and it is entirely insufficient to protect our trade and to uphold the dignity of our figs. There is no reason why we should not have fever of a typhoid character set in. The Prioce then continued to sink gradually until the last gleam of hope had departed, and he expired tranquilly at ten minutes to cleven o'clock."

The Queen and royal family surrounded the death hed of the Prince.
The Queen and royal family surrounded the death hed of the Prince.
The Observer, in announcing the lamentable event, exclaims:—"Peace to his ashes' A good husband, a good father, a wise Prince and safe counsellor—Eagland will not soot look upon his like again.

Defences of Pennsylvania.—Governor Connelly has recommended to the Legislative Assembly the repeal of the slave costs, enacted two years ago, and from the top of the state generupon the military affairs of the s do over again, and, working at the same rate, we would be able alone in our merchant yards to turn out, in one year, 583 ships of 1,000 tons each. In our six navy-yards, 1,000 tons each. In our six navy-yards where the choicest materials are stocked for building a fleet of 100 ships, 60 more men-of war ships might be built in one year, making a total of 643 men-of war ships, of all classes, varying in their armament from 3 to 60 guns More than a hundred of our greatest engi neering firms would complete all the machinery necessary to be put in these ships in ess than a year. Our capabilities and faci less than a year. Our capabilities and facilities of building ships have not, in the least, suffered by the loss of the second states, and late as 1850 they only built (combined) one full rigged ship, while the northern states built 110 ships of the same description. That is to say, in plain words, all the second states combined did not build even one per cent of the sea-going ships built in the University. cent, of the sea-going ships built in the Uni

It is true, on a very urgent occasion, in a a reat emergency, our country could largely increase her Navy, in a very few months, with very powerful descriptions of vessels, if they would proceed as follows:

Cut down all our line-of-battle ships one or two decks, case them with 5-inch fron plates, put a battery of 30 to 40 guns of the heaviest calibre on board of them, and moor them across the entrance of our harbors.-Plate our heavy frigates with shell-proof iron plates, and, to make up for the additional weight put into them, do away with their armament on the upper deck.

Transform one hundred of our best sea-going merchant steamers into so many fri-gates, aloops, dispatch and gunboats, of a speed superior to any men-of-war ships yet

Among our large clipper ships and traders more than 500 may be found that are capable to be transformed into so many efficient sailing sloops and frigures. Their length varies from 250 to 300 feet; their breadth from 40 to 52 feet, and whenever they are cut down one dock, or their decka are lowered, will be found capable of carrying an armament varying from 25 to 50 heavy guns, according to their respective capacity. Twenty and thirty or run errands for their wives.

British and American Naval Affairs.

Donald McKay, the celebrated American ship-builder, has sent the following letter to Republic, which exceeds in her dimensions the largest English 50 gun frigates, her shape for speed is incomparably rior.

The scantling of all these ships is well known to be larger than that of the best and strongest men-of-war ships of our navy.

Among the barks and brige there are especially to the complete and properties.

Among the barks and brigs there are custainly 400 to 500 capable of receiving an armament of from 8 to 20 guns, and more than a thousand of our large coasting schooners that have a breadth of 28 to 30 feet and over, and a form never surpassed for speed, can in a few weeks be transformed into men-of-war schooners, armed with one pivot gun of the heaviest description in the middle, and 2 to 4 82-pounders at the suda. These vessels have a very large stability, and the scantling of their timbers, &c., is by 30 per cent. heavier than that of the common men-of-war schooners.

per cent beavier than that of the common men-of-war schooners.

This fleet of about 2,000 vessels of war can (working with all the natural energy of our-nation) be turned out in less time than four to six months, and it would be sufficient to protect our coast and meet the first storm.

Time would so be gained to build a fleet, fit to represent our great nation, and to make fit to represent our great nation, and to make our flag once more respected in all seas of the globe.

But the time is pressing, our country is surrounded by dangers on all sides, and it becomes the imperative duty of our Government and people to act with the greatest energy without delay. The times are gone when Europe could be frightened with thundering newspaper articles, and the hollow hrag of ambisious politicians; we have to show now that we know how to handle engines of war, and to stand a hail of shells and balls.

A powerful fleet is the best guarantee of pesce for a great maritime nation; of the truth of this principle, England—whose motic is free trade and peace with all nations—is trade and peample, ost striking example, DONALD MCKAY. Yours, truly,

AN EXPLANATION.

The New York World has hit upon an in-genious and plausible excuse for the inaction

renious and plausible excuse for the inaction of the army, which we quote:

"The large quantities of arms recently arrived in this city, and on their way hither from German ports, explain the delay in military operations which has excited so much public impatience. These arrivals combine with other facts to raise the expectation of early movements on a large scale against the enemy. Our army has attained a creditable proficiency in military drill and evolutions, but the arms in the hands of many of the regiments consist of old muskets altered to answer a temporary purpose, but of little use against an enemy supplied with the best modern arms. Soldiers cannot be expected to stand their ground unless they have confidence in their weapons. With old fashioned amouth hore muskets of short range in their stand their ground unless they have confidence in their weapons. With old fashioned smooth bore muskets of short range in their hands, they would be liable to run away when they found that the enemy were doing terrible execution in their ranks and they were inflicting no injury in return. Upward of a hundred thousand of the very best arms manufactured in Europe will, in the course of a few days, be put in the hands of our solders in exchange for those they now carry, and immediately thereafter they will have an opportunity to exhibit their skill in using them."

THE BATTLE OF DRAINESVILLE-LOSS OF THE BATTLE OF DIGARREVILLE—LOSS OF THE REBELS.—A Union man, residing near Drainesville, came into our lines the next day with the booy of Mr. W. H. Marguff, of Com-pany B, of Kane's Rifle Regiment who was left on the field in the thicket. He was shot through the heart. This man also brought information that he had helped to bury one hundred and sixty rebels. The people of the vicinity all turned out, and were all day

The appearance of the battle field next morning was frightful. A number of the wounded had died during the night, and for one unite square bodies were found in fence corners and in fields and thickets. One man had tried to climb a fence and fell back ex-hausted and died. Pieces of limbs and manhausted and died. Pieces of limbs and man-gled bodles were literally piled up where the battery had been planted, and the destruction caused by exploding shells was fearful.

All the arms and clothes have been gather-ed up. The rebel cavalry visited the scene on Sunday. General McCall sent in all his wounded to the Georgetown Hospital, in or-der to have them better cared for. The rebel accounts admit that the "Pennsylvania Yan-kees" were too much for them.

IMPORTANT RESOLUTIONS .- But little was done in Congress last week—a quorum being seldom present. Among the resolutions was one offered by Mr. Wilson (Ind.), re-questing the Committee on Multary Affairs to report a bill for the ensetment of an additional article of war for the government of the army, whereby all officers in the military service of the United States shall be prohibitd from using any portion of the forces under their respective commands for the purpose of returning fugitive slaves from service or labor, and to provide for the punishment of such officers as may violate said article, by lismissal from the service. Mr. Noell moved to table the resolution .-

risagreed to.
The resolution was passed. Ayes 67, noes ot counted. On motion of Mr. Vandever (Iowa), the Committee on Territories was directed to inquire into the expediency of establishing Ter-ritorial Governments within the limits of the disloyal states or districts, and report by bill or otherwise. THE MISSISSIPPI EXPEDITION - Advices from Cairo, Ill., say:

"The preparations for the 'Great Expedi tion' are constantly going on, as rapidly, pe haps, as possible, but it seems to outsides very slowly. The six iron-clad gunboas which have been so long building at Caron-delet have all arrived here, but only two of them are yet equipped for service. The their are yet equipped for service. The others are lying at the levee, some receiving their armsment, and others undergoing certain alterations which most of them seem for some cause to require."

It will be three or four weeks before the Procedure will. ter to by the dir bee ext vistor of toe taking Ed tor I Has Loo dine tisc less corpore with the corporation of the corporation of rea va T

Expedition will be ready.

THERE was a flurry in the New York stock market last week, caused by an impress that a auspension of extensive specie p ments by the banks will precede the B large treasury negotiations.

The United States steamship Iroquols has the privateer Sumter blockaded in the port of Cienfugos. The United States gun-boat Flaming. beau was off Nassau biacksding the Rebel steamers Isabel, Theodora, and two schooners ps might powerful he Great mentions es, while hly supe-

e is well best and best and try, are cersiving an and more consting to 30 feet to 30 feet to 40 for a formed for a formed in the mid. Ility, and is by 30 common common try.

hollow have to idle en-ells and

of the

KAY.

n an in-naction

hither in mili-o much combine ation of inst the of the ered to ttle use est mo-confl-

n their

d they pward it arms urse of ur sol-

CATTY,

g near at day f Coms shot

ry one ple of il day

next

e man k exatherscene

e was being utions), readdi-ent of litary under

e, by on.-BOOM

, the to in-vices

pedi-

per-iders boats aron-ro of The iving

has.

apon

to be good and

ALMANAC. SATURDAY EVENING POST, 1862.

MONTHS.	Sunday, 1st Day	Monday, M. Day	Tuesday, 3d Day	Wednesday, 4th Day.	Thursday, 5th Day.	Priday, 6th Bay.	saturday, 7th Day.
JANUARY, 1st Month.	5 12 19	8 13 90 97	7 14 91 98	10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 1	10 10	3 10 17 24 31	111111111111111111111111111111111111111
PEBRUARY, 24 Month.	9 16	30 10 17 34	4 11 25 35	19	6 13 90 27	7 14 21	120
MARCH, 3d Month.	9 16 33 30	3 10 17 94 31	11 15 85	5 19 19 26	6 13 90 97	7 14 91	15
APRIL, 8th Month.	6 13 80 97	7 14 91	15	9 18 93 30	100 177 104	11 10 95	19
MAY, sth Month.	4 11 16 25	5 19 19	6 13 90 27	7 14 21 21	15 15 29	9 18 93 30	10 17 94 31
JUNE, 9th Month	1 6 15 92 29	9 16 23 30	30 100 177 194	4 11 18 95	112	6 13 90 97	14 91
JULY,	6 13 90 97	7 14 11 128	8 15 22 29	9 16 93 30	19 17 94 31	15 05	19 26
AUGUST,	3 38 17 94 31	4 11 10 95	5 12 19 26	6 13 90 97	7 14 91	15 27 29	9 36 30
SEPTEMBER, 9th Month.	7 14 21	15	9 16 23 30	3 10 17 24	4 11 10 93	5 19 19 20	6 13 90 97
OCTOBER, 10th Month.	5 19 19 96	6 13 98 97	7 14 91	1 8 15 92	9 16 20 30	3 10 17 94 31	11 19 95
NOVEMBER, 11th Month.	9 16 93 30	3 10 17 24	4 11 18 25	5 29 19 36	6 13, 90 97	7 14 91 90	15 99
DECEMBER, 19th Month.	7 14 21	1 8 15 99	9 9 16 33	3 10 17 94	4 11 18 25	5 12 19 96	6 13 20 27

NEWS ITEMS.

The resolutions in relation to the accession of Maryland to the confederacy have been modified by the Richmond Congress in secret assion, so as to declare, that no peace ought to be concluded with the United States which does not insure Maryland an opportunity of forming a part of the Confederacy.

deracy.

It is now necessary to have Acts of Con-It is now necessary to have Acts of Congress enrolled on skins of parchment before they are signed, which takes some time, and causes a deal of unnecessary delay at the close of the sessions. Senator Summer has introduced a bill dispensing with this relic of feudal customs, and providing for the simple copying of Acts in a fair hand, on linen paper, which will be far easier to preserve for reference than are the cumbersome rolls of parchment.

The British and American vessels, generally, in port, had their colors at half-mast on the 24th, on account of the death of Prince the 24th, on account of the Albert.

SomeBody has furnished all our contrabands at Fortress Monroe with spelling-books and primers, and "sich a spellin" and "sich a readin" as is in progress is really

ARMS.—It is estimated that nearly a quarter of a million of arms have been brought to this country during the past four months by the Hamburg line of steamships. Besides these, a large amount of war material, including infantry and cavalry equipments, have been imported from Europe. During the four of five months past, the Bremen line has undoubtedly brought a hundred and fifty thousand stand, besides equipments.

GEN, SCOTT arrived in the Arago.

sand stand, besides equipments.
GEN, SCOTT arrived in the Arago.
THE HON, A. B. Ely has been released in exchange for Mr. Faulkner. After a brief visit to headquarters at Fortress Monroe he took passage for Baltimore.
THE advance guard of General Sherman's army at Port Rayal, consisting of a battalion of the 45th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, under Col. Welsh, have advanced and taken possession of Fenwick Island, extending our lines to the south bank of the South Edisto river, thirty-five miles from Charleston.

ton.

In accordance with orders from General Halleck, the Provos Marshal General at St. Louis has directed that sixuen slaves confined in the St. Louis county jail, and advertised for sale under the state statute, be released from prison, and be placed under the control of the chief quartermaster of this department, for labor, till further orders—the said slaves being the property of rebels, and having been used for insurrectionary pur-

BLACK FREEMASONRY.

BLACK FREEMASONRY.

The following statements are taken from Leland's Continental Magazine. The writer travelled extensively through South Carolina, just before the passage of the secession ordinance by that state, and he asserts in the most positive manner that he has not exaggerated nor distorted in the least the scenes that met his eye. He declares that there exists among the slavus a sceret and wide-spread organization of a masonic character, having its grip, password, and oath. It has, he says various grades of leaders, who are competent and earnest men, and its ultimate object is freedom. He had with him an intelligent negro servant, and was on his way to visit a rich planter. Not far from the house he was met by the carriage of his host, in which was the body servant of the planter. The interview between the two negroes, and its results, are thus described:—

"Jim, this is Scip," I said, seeing that the devene had taken no votice of mech.

scribed:—
"Jim, this is Scip," I said, seeing that the darkeys had taken no notice of each the darkeys had taken no notice of each other.

"How d'ye do, Scipio?" said Jim, extending his hand to him. A look of singular intelligence passed over the faces of the two negroes as their hands met; it vanished in an instant, and was so slight that none but a close observer would have detected it. But some words that Scip had previously let drop put me on the alert, and I felt sure it had a hidden significance.

"Won't you get into de carriage, massa?" inquired Jim.

"No, thank you, Jim; I'll ride on with Scip. Our horse is jaded, and you had better go ahead."

Jim mounted the driver's seat, turned the carriage, and drove off at a brisk pace to announce our coming at the plantation, while Scip and I rode on at a slower gait.

"Scip, did you know Jim before?" I saked.

"Neber seed him afore, massa, but hab asked.

"Neber seed him afore, massa, but hab heern of him."

"How is it that you have lived in Georgewith the tract you have lived in George-town for five years, and he only seventy miles off, and you never have seen him?"

"I could hab seed him, massa, good many time, ef I'd liked, but darkeys hab to be careful."

"Careful of what?"

"Careful ob who dey knows; good many bad niggas 'bout."

"Pshaw, Scip, you're 'coming de possum;' that game won't work with me. There isn't a better nigger than Jim in all South Carolins. I know him well."

"Perhaps he am; reckon he am a good enuff nigga."

"Perhaps he am; reckon he am a good enuff nigga."

"Good enough nigga, Scip! Why, I tell you he's a splendid fellow; just as true as steel. He's been North with the Colonel often, and the abolitionists have tried to get him away; he knew he could go, but wouldn't budge an inch."

"I knew he wouldn't," said the darkey, a pleasurable gleam passing through his eyes; "dat sort don't run; dey face de musie!"

"Why don't they run? What do you mean?"

"Nuffin', massa—only dey'd rather stay har."

"Nuffin', massa—only dey'd rather stay har."

"Come, Scip, you've played this game long enough. Tell me, now, what that look you gave each other when you shock hands meant."

"What look, massa? Oh! I s'pose 'twar cause we'd both heerd ob each other afore?"

"Twas more than that, Scip. Be frank; you know you can trust me."

"Wal, den, massa," he replied, adding, after a short pause, "de ole woman called you a Yankee—you can guess."

"If I should guess, "twould be that it meant mischief."

time indicated, and was taken down, as were other conversations recorded in these papers, within twenty-four hours after its occurrence. The name and the locality only, I have, for very evident reasons, dis-

The same writer has the following in relation to the Knights of the Golden Circle:-

This latter organization, which was insti-tuted by John C. Calhoun, William L. Por-cher, and others, as far back as 1835, has for its sole object the dissolution of the Union, and the establishment of a Southern Empire —Empire is the word, not Confederacy or Republic—and it was solely by means of its secret but powerful machinery that the southern states were plunged into revolution, in defiance of the will of the majority of their voting population.

Nearly every man of influence at the South (and many a pretended Union man at the North) is a member of this organization, and sworn, under the penalty of assassination, to labor, "in season and out of

State of the first of the season of the folia, and intercept of any with the falled state of the season of the folia, and intercept of any with the falled state of the season of the folia, and intercept of any with the falled state of the season of the folia, and intercept of the folia and intercept of the folia and intercept of the f franklin. The Committee are trying to get at the cause of the Bull-Run disaster, and where the responsibility belongs. They intend also to institute a rigid inquiry into the Ball's Biuff disaster.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

FILOUR AND MEAL—There is very little export demand. The sales of Flour reach 14,000 of 12,000 bids, mostly western and extra family at 4.,75 to 6 for common to good and choice brands, including 5000 bids do, and 3000 bids (ity mills do, on private terms. Extra at 85,625; to 5,75, and superfine at 85,25 to 5,50 bids. the market closing very dull. The sales to trade have been limited within the same range of prices for su perfine and extras, and from 46,25 to 6,75 $1 bids for lancy brands, as in quality. Rye Flour is selling in a small way only at 84 $2 bid. Corn Meal is scarce but quiet at 85 for Pennsylvania.
GRAIN—The market has been fairly supplied with Wheat, and prices, under a limited demand both for shipment and milling, are fully 5c. p bushel lower, with rales of about 35,000 bushels to note at $1,30c1,35 for good and prime Pennsylvania reds, closing at the former rate to a story.

seasonation, to labor, "in season and out of season, by fair means and by foul, at all times, and on all occasions," for the accomplishment of its object. The blacks are bound together by a similar oath, and only bide their time.

The knowledge of the real state of political affairs, which the negroes have a foundation, the fatter alload includes a form of the stater alload includes a foundation, the fatter alload includes a foundation, the fatter alload includes the call affairs, which the negroes have a few foundation, the fatter alload includes sassination, to indoor, ill further orders—the side slaves being the property of rebels, and having been used for insurrectionary purposes.

This brig Empire, chartered and loaded with an assorted cargo at Boston, ten days since, by Capt. G. W. Poulsand, clears with government permission as the first trade ship for Port Royal. Capt. Poulsand expects to real state of politic Port Royal. Capt. Poulsand expects to real state of politic real state real state real state real state real state of politic real state rea of this city.

On the light uitimo, by the Key, T. B. Fernley, Pactor of Asbury M. E. Church, Mr. J. Henney
MCREHY, to Miss SALLIES B. LISTER.

ON SAUTHAY, Dec. 21st, by the Rev. J. Miller,
Mr. WILFHED H. HARNED, of this city, to Miss REBECCA SCHERZER, of Annyllie, Pa.

DEATHS.

Notices of Destin must always be accom-panied by a responsible name.

On the 24th ultimo, John McAllisten, Eaq. bis 73d year. of pneumonis, on the 31st ultimo, Madame Laura L. Drons. AURA L. DEGEN.
On the morning of the 21st ultimo, Rev. Lewis, ingaseman, D. D. in his 59th year.
On 5th day, 19th ultimo, Joseph B. Coopen, in

There is searcely any disease in which pargetive medicines are not required, and much slekmess and enfecting night to prevented were they more generally used. No person one feel well white a costive habit of loody prevails, besides, it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases, which night be avoided by threly and judicious use of proper Cathartic medicines.

Convinced of the correctness of these views, JAYNE'S SANATIVE PILLS

Are recommended with the greatest confidence, experience baving demonstrated them to be far superior to any other in use, being more unit, prompt, safe and uniform in their operation. While using them no particular care is required, and patients may eat and drine as essai. Againfly not also the particular of the correctness of these related to always readily dissolve in the element. It is small does they are alterative and patients may eat an early canad from all patients in the greatest confidences, and patients may eat an early canad from all patients may eat an early canad from all patients in the required and all ones they are alterative and gently have tive, but in large doese are written extractic, classing the whole almostary canad from all patients, irritating and feel meters really an in radiable article, gradually consequent that the properties of the surface of the surface of the surface of the particle gradually consequent and the properties which contain the Area capitally about the distinct of the world, attests the patients of these patients and farma all particle gradually consequents are really an invaluable article, gradually consequent them all particles are trickly gradually consequents that the properties are really an invaluable article, gradually consequent the properties are really an invaluable article, gradually consequent the state of the value of the surface of the particle gradually consequent to the properties are really an incomment of the particle gradually consequent to the properties are really an in the properties of the properties and the properti JAYNE'S SANATIVE PILLS

Are recommended with the greatest confidence, experience having demonstrated them to be issuperior to any other to use, being more mild, prompt, safe and uniform in their operation. While using them no particular care is required, and patients may sat and drink as senial. Against impair them, as they are so constanted as to always readily dissolve in the element. In small doesn they are alterative and gently laxative, but in large doesn are actively extractly, circuising the whole almentary canal from all putrid, irritating and feed matter.

For DYSPEISIA, these Pills are really an invaluable satisfie, readily all positives are the circuits and active or all particular and active or and active or all particular and active and active or CHERSEMAN, D. D. in his 59th year.

On 5th day, 19th ultime, Joseph B Coopen, in his 68th year.

On the 20th of Dec. Ann Vennez, widow of the late Jos. Coopen, in his 63th year.

On Friday, Dec. 20th, 1861, Adraham Wistan Shareless, in his 55th year.

On Friday, Dec. 20th, 1861, Adraham Wistan Shareless, in his 55th year.

On the 20th ultime, of consumption, Mark L. Stackhot St., in his 55th year.

On the 30th ultime, of consumption, Mark L. Stackhot St., in his 55th year.

On the 20th ultime, Mark R will of David Fourke, in his 70th year.

Dec. 23th, 18th, in Prince And, New Jersey.

William M. Scott, D. D., Professor in the Theory In the 18th ultime, of the Presbytains Church at Chicago, Hilmole.

On the 18th ultime, Ennis Livens, wife of Mr. Will, 18th ultime, Markaret, wife of Wm. Rolly, in her 20th, Markaret, wife of Wm.

HAIR. Investor of the embersted GOSSAMES VENTS LATING WIG and BLASTIC BAND TOUTACE

LATING WIG and ELASTIC BAND TOUPACES Instructions to enable Lactine and Gentlemen is neasure their own heads with accuracy.

For Wign, Inche.
No. I.—The round of the head.
2.—From forehead over the head to need.
3.—From ear to ear
over the try.
4.—From ear to ear
over the try.
4.—From ear to ear
over the try.
4.—From ear to ear
over the try.
4.—Over the errors round the lorehead.
It has a lways ready for all a splendfill slock of round the present of the least.

He has always ready for alls a splendfil stock of Gents' Wign, Toupeau, Ladius' Wign, half Wign Fritzola, Braids, Curle, dea, beautifully measured tured, and as choops as any cotabilishment in the Union. Letters from any part of the world will resire attention.

HAVE YOU A COUGH? Then use JATNE'S EXPECTORANT. Do not allow your cold to take its own course. Two thirds of the victims of Consumption own the fallictions to the fatal mistake of "waiting for a cough to get well of itself." Do not fall info this error, but avail yourself at once of a remosty which twenty-five years' experience has demon strated is certain to procure a speedy cure.

HAVE YOU ASTHMA OF PHTHISIS!

Then use JATNE'S EXPECTORANT, which will overcome the spasmodic contraction of the wind tubes, and cause them to eject the nuncous or matter which clogs them up, and by an easy and free expectoration, remove all difficulty of breating.

HAVE YOU BRONCHITIS? Then use JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. This wide-spread disease, which may be generally described as an inflammation of the fine skin which lines the inside of the wind tube or air vessels, spreading through every part of the lungs, is often mistaken for Consumption. The Expectorant subdues this inflammation, relieves the attending cough, pain, and difficulty of breathing, and, if the case is not of too long standing, will certainly produce a cure.

HAVE YOU CONSUMPTION?

Then use JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. It cleaness the lungs from all firstating metters, while at the same strue, it heals and invigorates them. Of all the remedies which have been offered the public for this dress ausers, none have stood the test of time, or analysismed so universal a popularity, as this Expendental Thomsands who have been given up by their physicians as incurable, have been restored to perfect health by its use, and their testimony must carry conviction to all who read it.

HAVE YOU PLEURISY?

Then use JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. By taking two or three large stores in the early stages of the disease, in quiek succession, and covering us warmly in bod, this preparation acts as a sufortice or averaling medicine, and subduce the inflammation at the outset.

HAVE YOU WHOOPING COUGH!

Then use JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. There is no remedy which so effectually overcomes this disease as the Expectorant. What parent can witness the sufferings of her children from this distressing compliant, without doing all in her power for their relief? What medicine so pleasant to the taste, or so restain to produce insinediate benefit? Give it a trial, then, and let it prove its efficacy. HAVE YOU CROUP?

Then use JAYNE'N JYPECTORANE, Children are subject to no disease more sudden in its attacks, or, in the absence of prompt relief, none more faid in the results, than Croup. Parents, therefore, should keep at land a remedy sure and therefore, should keep at land a remedy sure and therefore, about a remedy may be found in the Expectorant, and every careful mother will keep a supply by her.

KOLLOCK'S

IMPROVED DANDELION COFFEE. Made from the best Java Ceffer, is recommended by physicians as a superior, nutritions beverage for transcrid Denlity, Dyspepsis, and all Binous disorders.

THE CONFESSIONS AND EXPERIDO YOU WANT LUXURIANT ONGUENT will force them to grow heavily in six weeks (upon the selections) will have been discussed only allowed in the selections of the sele

R. DOLLARD, PRILACON-PRIA PRILACON-PRIA PRINTER ARTISTR

. Tomarit and fille.

Wit and Humor.

RANTANQUERO DE DOOM-JING-JING

THE WRATH OF THE REBEL RIVAL A ROMANCE OF THE WAR.

BY MCARONE.

On a fine morning in the lovely month of December, as the sun rose above the misty tops of the mountains that line the Potomac, a young officer might have been seen emerging from his test in the camp of the Rieventh

But it was no common tent.

It had cross-halls, a plazza, a wine-cellar, and a stove with a rifled stove-pipe, to make the smoke shoot straight.

Nor was this young officer a common young officer.

Scarcely forty-three, he had already won the proudest laurels of the gory field, and a black eye attested the blind fury of his valor In cold weather, he was always to be found where the fire was bottest. He was arrayed in a fine blue uniform, brass-mounted, and wore yellow gloves, a red coat, scarlet trowsers, a green cap, and a chaw of tobacco in either cheek. His loins were girded up for battle; fire sat upon his lip; death upon his sword; his neck was clothed with thunder, and his breath smelled of onions.

His-father had been an Indian, and his mother a Dutchman, but as both had petitioned Legislature to allow them to become natives of the M. E. Church, he claimed to be a Portuguese of the song arer, and his name was Senhor Don Rantanquero de Boom-jing-jing. He was seven feet high in his socks, weight, two hundred and eighty pounds, Troy weight -he weighed more in Albany-and had a good common-school education.

His manners were polished, some; his warhorse was fleet as the wind; he had suffered a good deal with rheumatiam, and knew Dr. Watte's Juvenile Poems by heart. In battle, he was awful. He wielded a Scottish claymore longer than himself, and a brace of double-back-action revolvers, presented him by the celebrated Gun-Maker of Moscow.

Thus much for our hero,
"Glorianna beautiful Glorianna!" murnaured be; "maiden of the blue hair and curly teeth, how have I dreamed of thee, this night !"

He turned, and saw a slave in crimson velvet approaching.
"Ho, minion?" he exclaimed, "bring sha-

All through the heavy watches of the purple night, while the lilies lay, immobile as planets, on the sheeny bosom of the tidal waves, and the odor-fainting tom-tom sang exuberant to the sleepy, juice laden creamtufts of the white magnolia.

But no; Miss Prescott has a copyright on all that sort of thing.

All night, let me say, then, quite plainly while Don Rantanquero dreamed of his love Glerianns, she sat in her bower on Pennsyl vania Avenue, and gazed afar out over the murky shades of Washington, to where the lurid camp-fires of the brave Eleventh Pon toons hurled back an angry glare upon the beavens. As day broke, she could see dawn's early light, the Star Spangled Banner, that was so proudly halled at the last beam ing of the twilight; although during the night the red glare of the rocket and the bombs bursting in air, had given proof that the flag

> "Long May it Wave!" [Aidrich.]

"Oh, Rantanquero !-- oh, my love!" cried the maiden, rubbing her left ear, " how long must we dwell in loneliness apart?"

This, occurring at the moment when our here uttered his loved one's name, was regarded as a very remarkable coincidence, and was frequently referred to for several years afterward, by these who were curious in such | Cartwright, Dumerge, and Parkinson.

The door of the bower was suddenly and angrily thrust open, and a young man entered.

"What in thunder are you calling that feller your 'love' for?" said this young He was a disagreeable person, who, being rich, was to marry Glorianna. She didn't want him for a husband, but her father was obdurate. He was a tough old cuss. "Avaunt, base villain!" cried Glorianna

"I loathe thee. By heaven, I swear it! Un hand me! Death before dishonor! Ha,

"Who's a techin' of yer?" asked the rich villain, whose name was Peter. At this moment the sullen roar of distant cannon was heard, some miles off.

"Go," excisimed the maiden; " your coun try calls! Who but a poltroon would linger, when the deep-voiced cannon speaks? Why tarry here in case and luxury?"

"I do'know," replied Peter: "I don't seem to keer much about this war "

The peerless beauty cast upon him a gazof withering scorn, that made his hair sizzle, and blistered his pose a little. " Don't get riled," said be.

"Go, then, and win a name in the field of blood and glory."

" Not any." " Leave me !"

Not till you promise to forget your foolish passion for Don Rantanquero.

" Desecrate not that name with your so: did breath!" cried Glorianna, and her eyes flashed so that a neighboring rooster thought it was sunrise, and began to crow.

I will have his blood?" roared Peter. Glorianna wept. She wept a good deal. Peter drew a jewel-hilted poignard from the bosom of his dressing-gown, and brandished it in the air. " Here one hour has elapsed," said he, "this we'p'n shall drink at the fountain of his

The reader will observe that this young man used imperfect language. The reason was that he was uneducated. He was born of poor but honest parents, and had made his fortune by writing for the religious

He started to leave the room, but Glorianna dung to him.

"Htay-stay," she sobbed; "take not so lear, so noble a life."

"I'll bat you in the eye," remarked he, of you don't let go o' me." She sank in a swoon and a corner,

Half-an-hour later, Peter stood in the tent of Senhor Don Rantanquero de Boom-tingjing. That mighty warrior lay on a sofa seleep. The brandy he had taken at break fast was a little too much for him.

With stealthy movement, Peter drew near and raising his glittering dirk high in the air, down it came with an uncerring aim and frightful force!

Let us draw a voil over this sail scene. Vanity Pair.

THE MINISTER AND THE BUMBLE BEES.

"Mississippi rejoices in the possession of the rude talents that distinguish a backwoods preacher known as 'Uncle Bob.' "On one occasion 'Uncle Bob' went to minister to the spiritual wants of some 'bre thren' who convened semi-occasionally at a little out-of-the-way church known by the very classic name of 'Coon Tail.' Inspirited by a crowded house, Uncle Bob turned him self loose in his most tragic style. He beat, stamped, and vociferated terribly. For some time previous the rude pulpit had been unoccupied. Invited by the apparent security and quiet of the place, a community of 'bumble bees' had built a nest beneath. Uncle Bob's peculiar mode of conducting the services had disturbed the insects; and just as he was executing one of his most tremendous gestures an enraged bee met him half way, and popped his sting into the end of Uncle Bob's huge nose. He stopped short, gave sundry vigorous but ineffectual slaps, when he heard a half-suppressed titter from some merry youths in a far corner of the house. Turning toward them with ill-concealed rage, he ex claimed, 'No laughing in the house of God; allow no laughing in my meetings. I'll thrash the first man that laughs as soon as service is over! This threat checked the incipient merriment. Uncle Bob regained his mposure, forgot the bees, and soon warmed up at a two forty lick. But again, in the midst of the most impassioned gesticulation, a bee struck him full in the forehead; he bowed, dodged, and best the air frantically, until a roar of laughter rose from the congre gation. Uncle Bob looked at them a mo ment with mingled feelings of rage and disgust, and then shouted, 'Meetin's dismissed Go home! Just go home, every one of you! But as for me [taking off his coat.) I don't leave this hill as long as there's a bumble-bee about the house! "-Harper's Magazine

EAST TOOTH PULLING ILLUSTRATED -Be fore the days of chloroform there was a quach who advertised tooth-drawing without pain The patient was placed in a chair, and the instrument applied to his tooth with a wreach, followed by a roar from the unpleaentity surprised sufferer. "Stop," cried the dentist, "compose yourself. I told you I would give you no pain, but I only just gave you that twinge as a specimen, to show you Cartwright's method of operating!" Again the instrument was applied, another tug, another roar. "Now don't be impatient, that is Dumerge's way; be seated and calm, you will now be sensible of the superiority of my method." Another application, another tug, another roar. " Now, pray be quiet, that is Parkinson's mode, and you don't like it, and no wonder " By this time the tooth hung by a thread; and whipping it out, the operator exultingly exclaimed, "That is my mode of tooth-drawing without pain, and you are now enabled to compare it with the operations of

A SALLOR IN COMMAND.—The routine of camp life is full of bright as well as of stiff colors. A correspondent of a paper writing from Camp Scott, relates that Capt. Mitchell, of the Union rifles, formerly captain of a revenue cutter, wished his men to file to the right, and, forgetting the regular order, sung

"Starboard, boys! I don't know what in thunder you call it on land?"

The file leader being a sailor, the command was duly obeyed.

THE SCHOOLMISTRESS AT HOME.lear boy," said a kind hearted country schoolmistress to an unusually promising scholar, whose quarter was about up-" my dear boy does your father design that you should tread the intricate and thorny path of the profes sions, the straight and narrow way of the ministry, or revel amid the flowery field of literature?" " No, marm," replied the juvenile prodigy, "dad says he's going to set me to work in the tatur patch."

OYSTERS AND THEIR AGES.-A London eyster-man can tell the ages of his flock to a nicety. The age of an oyster is not to be found out by looking into its mouth; it bears its years upon its back. Everybody who has handled an oyster-shell must have observed that it seemed as if composed of successive layers or plates overlapping each other. These are technically termed "shoots," and each of them marks a year's growth; so that, by counting them, we can determine at a glance the year when the creature came into rick." the world. Up to the time of its maturity, the shoots are regular and successive; but after that time they become irregular, and are piled one over the other, so that the shell becomes more and more thickened and bulky. Judging from the great thickness to which some oyster shells have attained, this mollusc is capable, if left to its natural changes unmolested, of attaining a great age.

CHRISTMAS SCENES.

EXCITED JUVENILE -" Oh, uncle dear, do dance with me-it's only a galon!"

"Life for a Life," the authoress thus truth-fully describes it:--"I have been thinking how horrible it must be to see anybody one cares for, drunk—the honest eyes dull and meaningless; the wise lips jabbering foolishness; the whole face and figure, instead of being what one likes to look at, takes pleasure to see in the same room even, growing ugly, irrational, disgusting-more like a beast than a man. Yet some women have to bear hide their bruitishness and keep them from making worse fools of themselves than they can help. I have seen it done, not merely by working men's wives, but lady-wives in drawing-rooms. I think if I were married, and saw my husband the least overcome by liquor, not "drunk" it may be, but just excited, silly, otherwise than his natural self, it would nearly drive me wild. Less on my wn account than his. To see him sinkot for a great crime, but a contemptible, owardly bit of sensualism-from the height where my love had placed him; to have to ake care of him, to pity him-ay, and I might pity him-but I think the full glory and pas ion of my love would die out, then and there

ABSURD PROPLE.-Chas. F. Browne, in a recent lecture, related an anecdote of a man who borrowed a watch while attending the funeral of his wife. The afflicted man took it from his pocket often, and on returning from the obsequies remarked, "It was just twenty minutes after three when we got her n." This point of the lecture was illustrated by another anecdote. A widow rushed out of a room in a supposed to be state of distraction, when she said to the mourners in waiting to attend the funeral of her husband, Just wait a minute till I get on my things, and we will start right along." A man in New York, at a statue gallery, asked if those Cupids would not look better with trowsers on ?" Of this stamp of absurd peo ple was also the man who inquired if the amese twins were brothers. In this city, ome years ago, when the panorama of Bun van's Pilgrim's Progress was on exhibition, a man entered and wanted to know if Mr. Bunyan was in? The lady who asked of the showman if she could go in without paying received as a reply that she might pay with-

EARLY INFLUENCES.-There can be no eater blessing than to be born in the light and air of a cheerful, loving home. It not only insures a happy childhood-if there be health and a good constitution-but it also makes sure a virtuous and happy manhood, and a fresh, young heart in old age. I think it every parent's duty to try to make their children's childhood full of love and childhood's proper joyousness; and I never see children destitute of them through the poverty, faulty tempers, or wrong notions of their parents, without a heartache. Not that all the appliances which wealth can buy are necessary to the free and happy unfolding of childhood in body, mind and heart-quite otherwise, God be thanked! but children must at least have love inside the house, and fresh air, and good play, and some good com panionship outside-otherwise young life runs the greatest danger in the world of withering, or growing stanted, or at best prematurely old and turned inward on itself. -Dr. Oldham, at Greystones.

A housemaid, who was sent to call a gentleman to dinner, found him engaged in using his tooth-brush. "Well, is he coming? said the lady of the house, as the servant entered. "Yos, ma'am, directly," was the reply; he's just sharpening his teeth."

GARRICK's SIZE.-When Foote was about to produce a play by puppets, a lady of fashion asked him if the figures were to be as large as life. "Oh, no, madame," replied Sam, "not much bigger than Gar-

Car "Will you marry me, miss ?" " No. indeed, you are too funny for my taste; I can take a jest, but not a jester."

We are told to weigh our thoughts: most men an i women would need a very small pair of scales.

(a) A beauty is apt to find no fault with her eyes, cheeks, or lips, but she upbraids her

HOW A DRUNKEN LOVER LOOKS.-In a | WHAT IS NEEDED.-We need for our dwellings more ventilation and less heat; we need more outdoor exercise, more sunlight, more manly, athletic and rude sports; we need more amusements, more holidays, more frolic, and noisy, boisterous mirth. Our infants need better nourishment than colorless mothers can furnish, purer milk than distilleries can manufacture; our children need more romping and less study. Our men need more quiet, and earlier relaxation from the labors of life. All men, both young and old, need less medicine and more good

At a training down east, after an order was given to "return ramrods," one of the soldiers broke from the line, and was off at full split. "Hallo!" bawled the commanding officer, "where are you going?" "Down to Squire Muggins, to return the ramrod borrowed of him. You said, 'Return ramods.'"

Agricultural.

BIRDS AND INSECTS.

At the late agricultural meeting at St. Gallen, in Switzerland, Baron von Tschudi, the celebrated Swiss naturalist, dwelt on the important services of birds in the destruction of insects. Without birds, said he, no agriculture and vegetation are possible. They accomplish in a few months the profitable work of destruction which millions of human hands could not do half so well in as many years; and the sage therefore blamed, in very severe terms, the foolish practice of shooting and destroying birds, which prevails more especially in Italy, recommending, on the contrary, the process of alluring birds into gardens and cornfields.

Among the most deserving birds he counts swallows, finches, titmice, redtails, &c. The naturalist then cites numerous instances in support of his assertion. In a flower-garden of one of his neighbors, three tall rose-trees had suddenly been covered with about 2,000 tree-lice. At his recommendation a marshtitmouse was located in the garden, which in a few hours consumed the whole brood, and left the roses perfectly clean. A redtail in a room was observed to catch about 900 flies in an hour. A couple of night-swallows have been known to destroy a whole swarm of crested wrens carry insects as food to their nestlings upon an average thirty-six times in an hour. For the protection of orchards and woods, titmice are of invaluable service .-They consume, in particular, the eggs of the dangerous pine-spiders. One single female of such spiders frequently lays from 600 to 800 eggs, twice in the summer season, while a titmouse with her young ones consume daily several thousands of them. Wrens, nuthatches, and woodpeckers often dexter ously fetch from the crevices of tree-bark numbers of insects for their nestlings. In 1848 an immense swarm of caterpillars, of the well-known genus Rombas dispar, had destroyed all the tree leaves in the orchard of Count Casimus Wadzibi, who observed the stems and branches coated, as it were, with a heavy crust of millions of eggs, sur rounded by a hairy skin. He employed scores of hands to scrape them off, but to no avail, and the trees were about to decay .-Luckily, towards the winter, numero flights of titmice and wrens frequented that part, and it was soon perceived that the nests of the caterpillars were visibly diminishing. In the spring time about twenty pairs of titmice made their nests in the garden, and in the course of the summer they had cleared the trees of all the caterpillars.

M. Tschudi considers sparrows to be very useful birds, as one single pair usually carry to their nest every day about 300 caterpillars, an advantage that amply compensates for the cherries the birds steal in the garden .-Owls also consume, morning and evening, vast numbers of wood insects. Some spe cies of birds, such as starlings, jackdaws, rooks, jays, and speckled magpies, are dis tinguished for destroying maybugs or cockchafers. White, of Selborne, who devoted some time to the observation of the movements of a pair of common barn owls, found, among other things, that they often carried to their nest a mouse every five minutes; while another pair of great owls had carried to their nest in one evening in June no less than eleven mice. Most of the smaller birds feed, either entirely or partially, especially during the hatching season, on insects, worms, snails, spiders, &c.; so do also hedge-sparrows, woodpeckers, thrushes, fly-catchers (Muscicapas), wagtails, larks, &c Without these useful birds, obnoxious in sects would increase in such masses as to become a permanent plague in Europe, and destroy all fruit and vegetation, like the locusts in the East; and the farmer, in balancing the gain and loss accruing from these seful birds, ought to consider the latter in the light of domestic servants, whose cost of keeping is amply repaid by their services.— English Periodical.

ICE HOUSES.

We have recently made some experiments with ventilating ice-houses, showing the great advantage of admitting warm oir to the sawdust which covers the ice at the top. A house, with double walls filled with sawdust received last winter its usual supply of ice; and the upper door through which the ice was passed, carefully closed. It was found this summer to be rapidly melting. The door was opened, and the melting ceased. This has been since repeated, and invariably with the same results. When the door is closed, and the air above the ice thus enclosed, becomes cold, the ice sinks away; when it is opened, and air admitted freely from the outside, the melting ceases. This will perhaps be accounted for in different ways by different persons, but the true explanation is probably this: when the door is closed, the air above the ice is reduced in temperature, and as a necessary consequence, becomes heavier and sinks or forces its way downward through the sawdust. Its temperature being above freezing, (although much below that of the common air,) it carries a constant tream of warmth to the ice and melts it. When the door is thrown open, and the air outside freely admitted to blow over it, this air cannot become cooled, and does not sink, and the ice is unharmed.

We have many inquiries from our corres pondents why their ice melts away so rapidly. As a general answer, we might say, you take too much pains in building tight icehouses. We never see ice keep better than in a oard shanty. The air must blow freely over the top of the sawdust, and this shanty was open all around. A rough floor admitted free drainage; about eight inches of sawdust was spread evenly over this floor: the ice was then built up in square blocks, leaving about eight inches around next to the siding of the shanty, which was filled and packed in as the structure of ice went up; and lastly the top was covered with about eight inches of sawdust. This was the whole process. The ice kept perfectly; was used all last summer and about two tons, which was left over, was thrown out last winter, when the building was refilled. A thickness of eight inches of packed sawdust may be regarded as a perfect non-conductor of heat, for all practical pur poses-perhaps six inches would do, if fine and evenly packed. If not packed, it may have cavities or orifices, and admit enough warm air to melt the whole .- Country Gen-

Useful Receipts.

TO CLEAN WHITE MARBLE MANTLES. Brush them well with a brush, such as pain ters use, daily, and wipe with a soft, dry towel. If soiled, dip a sponge in clean warm water and wash it, drying with a soft towel. To clean the carved part, wet a sponge with pumice stone, and gently rub on, washing off with pure water, drying with a towel; for the interstices, use a stick covered with a

TO WASH OIL CLOTH,-Oil cloth may be made to have a fresh new appearance, by washing it every month with a solution of sweet milk with the white of 1 beaten egg. Soap, in time, injures oil cloth. A very little "boiled oil" freshens up an oil cloth; very little must be used, and rubbed in with a rag. Equal parts of copal varnish I put; it gives a

To RED A YARD.-Many persons put red on a yard to cover green bricks. The green may be removed by pouring boiling water, in which any kind of vegetables (not greasy) have been boiled. Persevere in this a few days, and all green will disappear. For red color, make a solution of 1 oz. common glue to 1 gallon water; while hot, put in alum the gize of an egg, † pound venetian red, and 1 pound or more Spanish brown. Try a little on a brick, let it dry, and add color, if too light; water, if too dark.

INFANTS' ZEPHYR DRAWERS.

POR THE SATUNDAY EVENING POST. Purchase 4 oz. double zephyr; cast on 4 stitches; rib 2 and 2, 10 times; then knit, (quarter stitch) for a few rows; now widen at each end of the needle every 4th rib until there are 60 stitches on the needle; knit on until there are 27 ribs; now run a cotton through these stitches, after pulling out the needles (if you have not 2 pairs of needles,) and cast on the other leg, proceeding as above. When this one is also completed join the two, casting on one stitch in the centre. Now knit all across, till there are 27 ribs finish by 4 rows knit like heel, and bind off. Take up the loops upon the right side of the front, above where the legs must be joined, and knit rows enough to serve as a hem. In this knit 8 button holes, and cast off. Button-holes are made by casting off 8 at the proper place, then knitting on; when the sext row is knit, cast on 3 at the same place. The drawers are now ready to sew up at the legs. Then bind the top and button side of the front, with wide tape.

(These drawers are for the cold weather to be worn when in the open air.)

The Riddler.

GEOGRAPHICAL ENIGNA.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. I am composed of 53 letters. My 14, 33, 9, 19, 42, 45, 49, 10 a river in South America. My 3, 8, 10, 42, 26, 28, is a lake in Russia. My 27, 46, 50, 52, 43, is a volcano of Central

My 27, 36, 4, 45, 59, 5, 12, is a gulf of British

My 41, 46, 31, 6, 27, 40, 4, 38, is a cape of Green My 7, 28, 39, 46, 33, is one of the Philippine

My 22, 17, 87, 4, 14, 27, is a sea on the eastern coast of Asia. My 4, 8, 47, 45, 28, 51, 35, 53, 43, 7, is a sound in North America. My, 51, 21, 24, 15, 81, 51, is a strait in North America. My 2, 25, 34, 48, 26, 7, 30, is a mountain of the Himalaya Range. My 13, 8, 33, 24, 18, 48, is an isthmus of South America. My 45, 11, 42, 45, 14, is a bay on the western coast of South America. My 16, 28, 29, 51, is a county in Texas. My 23, 33, 90, 32, 48, is a river in Kentucky.

My 27, 44, 13, 9, 47, is a town in Russia. My whole is the dying words of a brave gene ral in the French and Indian War.

SAMUEL LAIRD.

MISCELLANEOUS ENIGMA. WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

I am composed of 14 letters. My 1, 2, 4, 11, is used for flooring

My 7, 5, 14, 11, is an animal. My 4, 5, 1, 7, is used in building. My 13, 10, 9, 12, 7, 5, is the name of one of the prophets. My 1, 9, 8, 13, 14, is an animal. My 12, 5, 4, 6, is a domestic article.

My 6, 5, 2, 10, is the property of a Chinese gentleman. My 5, 1, is a preposition.

My 8, 13, 5, 14, is a fruit. My 9, 12, 5, 2, 5, 7, is a prophet. My 8, 2, 10, 4, 12, is what doctors often give. My whole is a Scripture name J. WILLIS HALL

RIDDLE.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. From early morn till late at night, Whate'er you do, whate'er you say,

I've prompted you such things to do-I'm with you through the livelong day. And then when you have sought your couch,

And all around's so calm, serene Your eyelids close—you gently doze— Perchance I'm mingling in your dreams. The offspring of a fertile brain

I quickly come, am soon forgot; Am sometimes great and sometimes small-I'm with you now, you know it not. Tonica, Ill.

REBUS. WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

A division of North America. A division of North America.

A division of South America. division of North America.

A division of Europe. A division of North America. A division of North America.

My whole is one of the grand divisions of the

TRIGONOMETRICAL PROBLEM.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVERING POST. A certain noble and very straight tree, being 180 feet high, standing just at the foot of a regular rising hill, was struck by a gale of wind, which broke it at some distance from the ground, and, without slipping with its broken ends apart, it lodged with its top 170 feet higher up the hill. I then went up the hill until I was on a level with the broken end, and there I measured over to the top of the straight up standing stump, and found the distance of this level 32 feet 9% inches. Can any one tell me at what distance from the ground the tree had broke? DANIEL DIEFENBACH.

Kratzerville, Snyder Co., Pa An answer is requested.

PROBLEM.

If the wages of 5 men for 17% days be $32 13-16, what sum will 15 men earn in 26% days at the

CONUNDRUMS. What tree pinches the Jews? Ans .- The niper (Jew-nipper.)

Why are the rebels like peas in the pod ? rou can take them. What is the association between a ladder and a father? You get up the one-the other

A Difference .- What is the difference becen a milk-maid and a swallow? Ans.-One skims the milk and the other the water.

In answer to several inquiries we publish the ollowing :- Ed. Riddler.

Mosars. Deacon & Peterson-As I have not ommunicated with you for some time, I thought would write a few words in explanation. have been away nearly six months, in Col. Baker's California Regiment; and being now leave of absence (an invalid) I am exceedingly glad to renew my acquaintance with my old friend the Post.

Your most obedient servan

ANSWERS TO RIDDLES IN OUR LAST. ACROSTICAL ENIGMA-Brevity is a gree praise of eloquence. DOUBLE REBUS-IL.
Peterson, Edt. of Sat. Eve. Post—(Hoangho, Pikestaff, Euphrates, Tampa, Everest, Rome, Saratov, Okcünokee, Nip, El Dorado, Damaras, Thibet.) RIDDLE—Show. CHARADE—Rib-band. TRIGONOMETRICAL PROBLEM—100 Answer to PROBLEM by O. H. S., published

Dec. 7th—15 rods long and 10 rods wide. Charles Cottrell, Newport, R. I. F. A. Slater, Chardon, Ohio, gives as his answer 20 by 25 rods. And answer to the ARITHMETICAL QUESTION

Answer to A. D. Young's PROBLEM Dec. 14th-15. John Andrews, Muncy, Lycoming Co., Pennsylvania.

Of the That o 1 wept: Disappol

Thus sp

"The Sure!

Life.

Figi

Answe

They

Loftier

To rew

Pityingly

ving Brigh the camp had manag

Once in hing more ear which he noble and pricke ben lay d wraps, and Several h